Senate Votes Tax Cut Of 4.8 Billions, 78-11

Draft Need Is 'Sold' to Senators at Secret Talks

New Preparedness Program Is Being Put in Shape for Truman, Congress

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Senate committeemen came out of a secret session with Administration foreign policy and defense chiefs late yesterday convinced of the "urgent necessity" of a selective draft.

For nearly an hour, Secretary of State George C. Marshall talked to the Senate Armed Services Committee about the world situation and proposals to build up American defense forces to meet it.

Afterwards there was evidence that a considerable number of the group were impressed also of the need for universal military training. Defense Secretary James Forrestal also testified at the closed-door meeting, and Army Secretary Kenneth Royall was present.

Roberts is Heard

Earlier, the committee heard Owen J. Roberts, retired Supreme Court Justice, declare that the Communist Party is the 'organized core of opposition to universal military training." Defeat of the bill, he testified, "is now Russia's objective in the field of our domestic policies."

Over at the Pentagon, officials worked into the night to ready the new preparedness program for presentation to President Truman today or tomorrow. It will be presented to Congress Thursday.

Besides UMT and selective service, the program is expected to call for:

1. Filling out existing Army units abroad, as island bases and at home and the activation of probably five or six divisions as a "mobile striking force" in this country. This will require an Army of about 800,000 men, plus some 80,000 more as instructors in UMT camps.

2. An Air Force of 70 groups—15 more than at present.

3. Additional men for the Navy to fill out the under strength crews of ships of the existing fleet plus an expanded training establishment. Build up the Marine Corps from its present 80,000 man strength to full authorized strength—100,000 men.

Such a program would require drafting close to 700,000 men during the coming year, one official estimated.

May Move Rapidly

Marshall warned that events may move with rapidity in Europe, one Senator disclosed afterwards, and joined with Forrestal and Royall in calling for speedy approval of universal military training and draft legislation to meet the impending crisis.

"We talked about the generally critical and more progressively serious situation in Europe," Chairman Chan Gurney told reporters. "It is my firm belief that the committee members left the room feeling the absolute necessity for quick passage of both measures."

While some members said they would not make such a sweeping conclusion as this, there was no doubt but that President Truman's controversial proposals had gained ground.

One or two of those reached last night felt that they needed further convincing about the need for both UMT and the draft. No

Warren Attacks Policy on Russia

Gov. Earl Warren of California, in his first political speech outside his home State, delivered at Lincoln, Nebr., yesterday, criticized the "appeasement and changing policy" of the Administration in foreign relations. He said the United States should lead a "make or break" protest to the United Nations against Russian aggression.

Russia Under Fire in Security Council

Cadogan's Attack Follows Papanek's Appeal for Action

Lake Success, March 22 (AP).—Britain told the United Nations Security Council today that the tide of communism must be "dammed back" even at the risk of war.

Sir Alexander Cadogan, one of Winston Churchill's top aides in the war years, blamed Russia directly for the Communist grab in Czechoslovakia.

Cadogan said it was the same familiar pattern which had swept Romania, Bulgaria, Albania, Hungary and Poland into the Soviet sphere.

"There are limits beyond which this tide must not advance, and it must be dammed back," Cadogan said solemnly. "Almost every one in the world must hope fervently that this can be done by peaceful means, but there is an undeniable risk that that hope may not be fulfilled."

Papanek Appeals for Action

The British delegate addressed the council after Jan Papanek, anti-Communist Czechoslovak delegate fired by the new Prague regime, made an ardent appeal for U. N. action against Russia.

Declaring he had direct evidence that Moscow engineered the coup, Papanek said with emotion: "God help me, I shall prove this to you."

An unidentified woman shook Papanek's hands as he left the Council table. Applause had broken out in the audience earlier when the Council overrode strenuous Russian and Ukrainian objections to give Papanek a chance to speak. The vote was 9 to 2.

Cadogan's denunciation of Soviet expansionism was the strongest big power attack thus far in the council on the communist movement in Europe.

Gromyko Sits Silently

Soviet Delegate Andrei A. Gromyko never moved throughout the long speeches by Cadogan and Papanek, whom Gromyko calls a traitor to the Czechoslovak people. Gromyko and Papanek sat side by side at the table but avoided looking at each other.

Gromyko told a reporter outside the chamber that the British delegate had made the "same ridiculous assertions" which Chilean Delegate Hernan Santa Cruz put forward last week in bringing the Czechoslovak case officially before the Council.

Papanek told the Council that direct pressure from Prime Minister Stalin himself forced Czechoslovakia to reverse the decision to participate in the Marshall Plan conference in Paris.

"I reject any suggestion that President Benes is a free man," Papanek said. He contended the president would have resigned if he were free.

Communist Grabs Listed

Papanek said persons now in Germany and enroute to London were ready to give the Council direct evident that Russia carried out the grab in Prague.

Dr. Vladimir Houdek, new delegate from the Czechoslovak Communist government, told a news conference his government would not participate in the debate.

"The Security Council is violating the (U. N.) charter by intervening in Czechoslovakia's affairs," he said.

Yugoslavia Wants Gorizia For Trieste

U. S. Belittles Plan, Saying Tito Offers Nothing in Proposal

Italy Is Thankful

Big 3 Plan Protested

Belgrade, March 22 (AP).—Foreign Minister Stanoje Simic said tonight Yugoslavia is willing to consider giving Trieste to Italy in return for Gorizia, an Italian city north of Trieste.

The statement was made at a news conference several hours after delivery of a formal Yugoslav protest against the proposal of the United States, Britain and France to return the entire Free Territory of Trieste, including the major Adriatic port city, to Italy.

The Yugoslav note protested the method and timing of the three-power proposal, but did not commit Marshall Tito's government to acceptance or rejection.

U. S. Scoff at Plan

[United Sttaes Government officials scoffed at what they termed the effrontery of the Yugoslav proposal.

[They made it plain the American Government would reject the Yugoslav offer.

[One key Washington official pointed out Simic was trying to trade something he does not have—(Trieste)—for something—(Gorizia)—which now is an integral part of Italy.

[The Simic offer is viewed by these officials as a belated Yugoslav attempt to take their Italian Communists friends off a hot spot.

[Press officer Michael McDermott said the State Department had received nothing from Yugoslavia on the Trieste question and knows nothing officially of Simic's statement.]

Slavs Willing to Consult

Simic told newsmen Yugoslavia would be willing to consult with Italy "in the spirit of the Tito-Togliatti talks."

This was a reference to the talks between Marshall Tito and Palmiro Togliatti, the Italian Communist leader, in hte fall of 1946, prior to the working out of the peace treaty settlement creating the Free Territory of Trieste.

Togliatti said Tito offered at that time to take Gorizia and give Italy Trieste, provided Italy gave the port city an autonomous statute safeguarding the rights of Yugoslav inhabitants. The offer was turned down by the Italian cabinet on November 7, 1946. Gorizia remained Italian, outside the Free Territory.

"The Yugoslav government has always felt that a most satisfactory solution of the Trieste question—which is so delicate for both parties—could be reached between Italy and Yugoslavia," Simic said.

He said the Yugoslav government was willing to enter into negotiations with the present regime headed by Premier Alcide de Gasperi.

House Debate Starts Today On Aid Bill

GOP Leadership Appears Well Aware Of Need for Speed

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

The House of Representatives starts general debate today on a huge and complex bill providing $6,205,000,000 of American aid in the coming year for western Europe, Greece, Turkey and China.

The debate will be the biggest hurdle so far encountered by the European portion of the bill, the $5,300,000,000 European Recovery Program already approved by the Senate. Opposition is stronger in the House than in the Senate, leadership in foreign affairs is weaker, and the prospect of cuts and other amendments is greater.

Every Sign of Awareness

But there was every sign yesterday that the House Republican leadership was wide awake to the need of speedy action, in the hope of forestalling Communist victory in the Italian election on April 18.

One sign came unexpectedly when Representative John Taber's Appropriations Committee approved every penny of an Administration request for 55 million dollars in added stopgap aid to Italy, France and Austria. The full House promptly indorsed the committee's decision by voice vote, after only half an hour of debate.

Thus, the Taber committee and the House restored in a single day most of the cuts they had made early last winter in the original gift for stopgap relief. Their action assured that there would be no break through lack of funds in the pipelines bringing essential American food and fuel to the three countries.

Committee Moves Quickly

Another sign of speed from the Republican leadership came in swift action by the House Rules Committee to bring the huge foreign aid bill to the floor. In the past this powerful committee has been hostile to many international programs; only last week it bottled up, presumably for the rest of the session, a resolution put-

Back-to-Jobs Plan Fails to Win Miners

Truman May Act Under Labor Law If Lewis Finally Rejects Proposal

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

Miners' union representative late yesterday tentatively rejected a Government back-to-work proposal to end the coal strike. Their final decision is due before noon today and, it is felt, will almost certainly be a conclusive "no."

The proposal was made by Federal Mediation Chief Cyrus S. Ching, who met yesterday afternoon with representatives of the principal coal operators' associations, and a three-man team from the United Mine Workers.

John L. Lewis, the union president, himself distained to attend the conference. Before his representatives indicated their disfavor of the proposition, however, it is believed they checked with Lewis by telephone.

Operators Accept "Reluctantly"

The operators accepted the idea, but with "reluctance." They were convinced that the matter was academic, for they were sure Lewis would have none of it.

In that event, Ching indicated to reporters last evening, he will report the situation promptly to the White House.

He apparently thinks his office can do nothing more in the week-old strike at this time, for he said that, on Lewis' expected rejection, he would tell the President that "the efforts of the Federal Mediation Service have come to nought."

His proposal called for:

1. The UMW to do "everything in its power" to induce the miners to go back to work immediately.

2. "Upon the resumption" of mining operations, the unions and the operators to agree on a three-man fact finding board. That body would report on all the issues in controversy. Its study and recommendations would not be binding on the parties, but would be used "as a basis for the collective bargaining procedure" set forth in the national union-operators contract.

Pension Fund Now Dormant

If the parties could not agree on the membership of the fact-finding board, Ching said the Mediation Service would try to make the appointments.

Ching's proposal also provided for Lewis, as one trustee of the miners' welfare and retirement fund, and Ezra Van Horn, trustee representing the operators, to get

140 Perish As Holy Land Flames Anew

British Use Artillery In Effort to Check Rising Tide of War

Jerusalem, March 22 (AP).—The bloodiest 24 hours of fighting in Palestine's current reign of violence tonight left 140 dead, including four British soldiers and a British constable.

The British used artillery in attempt to stem the rising tide of civil war. Their shells blasted Ishwa village, Arab headquarters in Hartuv. The Arab press reported 60 killed and 100 wounded there. A British officer said 23 bodies were counted. Four British soldiers were killed in the action.

Another bloody spot was Nizanim, near the Mediterranean coast in the land of the ancient Philistines. There, 20 Jews and 31 Arabs were reported killed in two pitched battles.

Three-way fighting described by observers as the "heaviest since partition" still raged in battered Haifa. Six Arabs and a British constable were killed there. British tank guns dispersed Arabs threatening a Jewish transport.

An explosion wrecked the thickly populated Iraq street in the center of the Arab section of Haifa. Police attributed the attack to Jews. The blast touched off a bitter Arab-Jewish battle.

A truck loaded with explosives penetrated the Arab section and blew up. Jewish sources said the truck was driven by two members of the Stern Gang who escaped before the blast.

Police reports said five Arabs died in the Haifa explosion and 31 were injured. Eight houses were destroyed.

Arab mortars immediately began bombarding the neighboring Jewish business center. A British

Floods Cause Millions Loss In 11 States

Homes Abandoned, Factories Closed; Rain Falls in Ohio

Chicago, March 22 (U.P.).—Flood waters surged over sections of 11 northern states and eastern Canada today, forced hundreds of persons from their homes, closed some industrial plants and caused damage estimated in the millions of dollars.

Rain fell in the Ohio Valley and the northern plain states, adding to flood dangers. More rain was forecast for the Midwest. U. S. Army engineers warned that if rains are heavy the rest of the week there will be dangerous floods along the Mississippi, Missouri and Illinois rivers.

Rivers and streams were above flood stage in parts of North Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New York. Families have been forced from their homes in section of Iowa, Pennsylvania, New York, Missouri and Eastern Canada.

Rail lines were severed, schools closed and highways blocked in some areas.

The Iowa River smashed through a levee a mile north of Oakville, Iowa, today and flooded 4000 acres of rich farmland.

In New York State, flood waters of the Susquehanna and Chenango rivers cut all highways leading to Binghamton, caused widespread damage in residential areas and forced evacuation of 1500 persons.

More than 5000 children remained away from classes in the Binghamton area.

In the northwestern Pennsylvania watershed, the upper Allegheny poured over its banks and into Oil City streets, with the crest yet to come.

Margin 19 More Than Required To Override Veto; Is Retroactive

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

The Senate yesterday approved a 4.8 billion dollar cut in individual income taxes by a landslide vote of 78 to 11, or 19 more than needed to over-ride a Presidential veto.

The bill was sped back to the House which is expected to accept all of the Senate changes and send it to the White House "as is." The House will call it up tomorrow under a special rule.

A White House veto was taken for granted. An overrider appeared equally certain unless President Truman can persuade Congress that measures needed to meet the world emergency will wipe out any budget surplus.

30 Democrats Support Cut

Senate passage followed a series of announced Democratic switches to the bill by once confirmed foes of an immediate tax cut. Most of the converts said they were voting for tax reduction now to provide a "more equitable" tax base but would not hesitate to raise taxes sharply within the year if world developments make it necessary.

In the end, 30 Democrats joined 48 Republicans in support of the cut. The 11 "No" votes were all cast by Democrats.

A dozen modifying amendments, including the President's proposed $40 credit for all and restoration of the excess profits on corporations, were shouted down just before the final vote.

Refuse to Quibble

The bill scales down the 6½ billion dollar cut previously voted by the House by nearly two billion dollars but House Republican leaders refused to quibble about the difference.

They first planned to call it up in the House for final passage today but when Democratic objections threatened they requested a special rule making a House vote in order tomorrow.

The cuts, all retroactive to January 1, 1948, provide:

1. An increase in personal and dependency exemptions from the present $500 to $600. This would automatically drop 7,400,000 lowest income taxpayers from the rolls, and reduce the taxes of others.

Percentage Reductions

2. Percentage tax reductions ranging from 12.6 per cent in the lower income levels to 5 per cent in the higher. The House had approved a 30 to 10 per cent range to cuts, by entirely different stepdowns.

3. Permission for husbands and wives to split their income for tax purposes, thus qualifying for lower tax brackets. Married couples thus could file joint returns, divide their net income and exemptions by two, compute their tax on this basis, and multiply the result by two.

4. An additional $600 exemption for taxpayers who are 65 or over. Also an additional $600 exemption for taxpayers who are blind. A blind person who is 65 or over could thus claim two extra $600 exemptions.

Estates, Gifts Included

5. Application of the "splitting" principle to estate and gifts taxes. Thus property passing to a surviving spouse in effect would be halved for estate tax purposes. Similary, husbands and wives may treat their gifts as being made one-half by each spouse.

Later Senate Democratic Whip Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), who sponsored a similar bill last year, said he would support it even though he had to vote for tax increases later. He accused Republicans of "political manipulations," however, in their sudden submergence of the 6½-billion-dollar Knutson bill cuts.

Warns It May Be Short

Senator Brien McMahon (R., Conn.) another former foe of tax reduction, said he would vote for the bill reluctantly "in the interest of tax equality" mainly because of split income features. But he warned that the cut may be of "short duration."

Senator Elbert Thomas (D., Utah) said he would not only support the cut but "if this bill should be vetoed, I will vote to override."

Others to throw their support to the bill in surprise last-minute announcements included Senators William Langer (R., N. Dak.),

Caddy Admits Fatal Sniping From Lodging House Window

A golf caddy yesterday admitted he was the mystery sniper whose shots from a fourth floor room in a Salvation Army lodging house killed a man on the sidewalk below last Thursday and wounded another on Sunday.

The sniper, James Daniel Carraway, 28, who was arrested early yesterday and charged with murder and assault with a dangerous weapon, explained his actions by saying the men he shot at had been "talking about him." But police declared they were complete strangers to him.

Carraway, who has held various jobs since he came to Washington in 1941, insisted at a coroner's inquest that he "didn't shoot to kill anybody." The coroner's jury held him for grand jury action.

He had told police that from his room at 7th and P sts. nw., he had fired his old-style .38 caliber revolver several times during the past few days at groups of men on the northeast corner of the intersection.

Because he had overhead people talking about him as long as six months ago, he had bought the revolver from someone in a poolroom, paying $8 for it, he told Detective Sergeant Richard J. Felber of the homicide squad.

He said he was awakened on Thursday morning by loud talking and heard some men on the sidewalk saying he belonged in St. Elizabeths Hospital and that his mother was "the same way." He got out of bed, opened the screen, and fired one shot in the midst of a group of men, he told the detective.

He wanted to shoot "betwixt" them to scare them, he declared. After placing the gun under his

Says Truman Shares His Hope

Michael Again Voices Desire To Regain Romania's Throne

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Former King Michael of Romania, sober and unsmiling, yesterday declared he hopes once again to rule the Romanian peoples—and that his hope is shared by President Truman.

The 26-year-old former monrach has declared he abdicated his throne almost at gunpoint and, once out of the country, said his abdication had been "imposed" upon him and therefore was not binding. He talked with President Truman for nearly a half hour yesterday.

At the conclusion of the talk, Michael said he had told the President "about conditions in my own country."

"We understand ourselves very well," he said.

Asked to elaborate on just what conditions are in Romania now, Michael said "pretty hot, as everywhere else."

Michael, who said he would be "too busy" to sight-see while in Washington, was asked whether he planned to see Secretary of State Marshall. He explained that Marshall had been arriving for a conference with Truman as he was

Settlement Formula Reached In 11-Week-Old GSI Strike

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

A strike settlement formula engineered by Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming has been accepted by both sides in the 11-week-old GSI cafeteria walkout.

About 600 members of Local 471, CIO Cafeteria Workers, ratified the settlement last night at a meeting in Shiloh Baptist Church, 1500 9th st. nw. Government Services, Inc., accepted it Saturday.

The 80,000 Government workers who patronize the 42 GSI cafeterias wil find picket lines again this morning, however, said union business agent Oliver T. Palmer. This is necessary, he explained, at least until the union's action is reported this morning to Fleming.

Now begins the task of carrying out the agreement; of returning to their jobs those of the 1000 strikers who are shown to be more efficient than the workers GSI hired to replace them.

Sore point in earlier peace attempts was the method of finding an arbitrator to settle these cases of disputed efficiency.

Notified of the union acceptance last night, Fleming disclosed that the procedure agreed upon was

South Dakota's Dead-Shot Chan Gurney Has Business Background, Is a Veteran

Senator Chan Gurney, a dead shot with his own gun, has been asked to put guns in the hands of Americans.

But not for training in popping off South Dakota ring-necked pheasants, the Senator's own hunting specialty.

Gurney is chairman of the increasingly powerful Senate Armed Services Committee, and as such is being asked to speed temporary renewal of Selective Service and more permanent adoption of Universal Military Training.

The 51-year-old businessman of Yankton, S. D., is not without army experience of his own. He served 19 months overseas with the Thirty-Fourth Engineers during World War I, though none in actual combat.

SENATOR CHAN GURNEY
In the News Today

Always for Strong U. S.

This did not hold him back, however, in pre-World War II days from advocating intervention, condemning isolationism, and blasting out at those who labeled isolationism a product of the midwest. Then, as now, he was for a militarily strong United States.

Senator Gurney is short enough to measure himself in half inches. "I'm 5 feet 6½ inches," he says, rising defensively to the balls of his feet. He weighs 170-180 pounds, or "too darn much." Conservative clothes and rimless glasses plus his own life background give him a businessman's look.

Gurney was born in Yankton, a county seat and farming center of 7500 population, on May 21, 1896. He gravitated quite naturally into the family's seed and tree business; broke out of it in 1928 to operate his own radio station, still in Yankton.

In 1936, he opposed New Deal candidates, and lost. He tried again, and won, taking his seat as Republican Senator here on January 3, 1939, and was reelected in 1944. When Republicans gained control of the Senate in 1946, he das named to head the Armed Services Committee.

Asked once why he favored military preparation, he replied, characteristically:

"When I ran for reelection in 1944 my opponent based his campaign on my vote for the 18-year-old draft and other such issues. And the voters gave me a rousing majority."

Though he gruffly admits to having no hobbies ("haven't got the time") he just as readily admits to a fondness for pheasant hunting and gets a wistful look when the subject of fishing is mentioned.

He and his wife (married July 4, 1917) live quietly here at 2407 15th st. nw. in an apartment house officially named for that address. Back home in Yankton live their sons, John, salesman in office supplies, and Deloss, college law student, and one daughter, Mrs. Morgan T. Smith.

Senators Sold On Draft Need dissent, however, was evidenced as the case for the latter.

Line Not Drawn

Gurney told reporters that Marshall did not "draw any line" which the United States is determined to hold or describe any situation which would cause America to take direct action to stop Russia. Senators had said that they would quiz Marshall on this point.

One of the group who requested that he not be quoted by name said that the Secretary of State was asked what we would do if Italy would go Communistic in the April 18th elections.

Marshall replied, he said, that that would be dictated by the particular situation at the time. To reporters' questions on this point, Gurney stated:

"No statement was made at the meeting that any line has been drawn or would be drawn where we would say that this is as far as you (Russia) can go and no farther. And I know of nothing to indicate that we are drawing such a line."

No New Information

The Senators declared that no new information of importance about the world situation was given them in secret at the closed conference. Senator Robertson (R., Wyo.) said that Marshall "seemed much encouraged about the effect that the Senate vote on the European Recovery Plan had had abroad.

Robertson said he favored building up our defense forces quickly by selective service but was not convinced as yet as to the need for UMT now. Previously, he had been a supporter of the training program, but declared "the draft seems the urgent thing now."

Smear Attempt Charged

Justice Roberts' statement that Communists are the "core" of the oposition to UMT drew an immediate reply from the National Council Against Conscription. The group charged that Roberts is seeking to "smear" them. The "spearhead of the opposition to universal military training has come from the large church, farm, labor and education groups," it said.

At the same time, another group of opponents protested that the American people are being asked to "write a blank check for commitments in the international scene, with the figure to be filled in by the military."

(See "People in the News" on Page 2 for sketch of Gurney)

Marshall Plan Held Vital to West Germany

Inclusion of western Germany in the Marshall Plan is the single most important step—economically, politically and psychologically—for its recovery, according to Dr. James R. Newman, American military governor of the Land of Hesse.

Interviewed here yesterdry, Dr. Newman declared that the setting aside of a seventeenth seat for Germany at the Council table of the 16 nations participating in the European Recovery Program had an "electric effect" in the western zones.

"It will increase the morale of millions of Germans who had the attitude of hopelessness," he said. "It makes them feel that they are part of the Western World. It permits our past preaching on the value of democracy to take effect."

Trade Flow Held Needed

In addition, he asserted, a degree of prosperity for Germany, afforded by the ERP, will benefit the rest of Western Europe. Prosperity among other nations in that area, he contended, is impossible without a flow of trade between them and Germany.

Here for a flying visit after three years in the American occupation government of Germany, Dr. Newman asserted that an increased level of production was possible without any danger of reviving the Germany military machine.

"The demilitarization of Germany has been completely successful," he said. It has no army and no general staff and if there is an underground campaign to restore them, it is of "unimportant" dimensions. Former German war factories, now under complete control of the ocupying powers, constitute no threat, he added.

He expressed hope that the American-British plan, announced last summer, to raise production in western Germany to the 1936 levels could be achieved by 1951.

In this event, he said, with the Germany worker given enough to eat, "he will be the last person in the world to accept communism."

But, he admitted, if the present living standard is not increased, "I don't see how we could help Germany from going Communist; I don't see anything to stop it. Depressed living conditions are what breed converts.

"Stalin and his followers know this. That's why they want Germany kept at a low industrial level, in order to be able to put across the Communist ideology."

Trade unions, first target of the Communists, nevertheless have been remarkably free of Communist infiltration, at least in Hesse, Dr. Newman said. There is evidence, however, he said, that the Communist Party planted members in the railroad labor organizations in order to foment strikes.

Propaganda Cited

There is also an attempt at propaganda by some groups of former German soldiers, returned from Russia after capture. These men are completely indoctrinated and disciplined in the Communist program, Dr. Newman said.

Their influence, however, is much less than that of the bulk of returned prisoners of war. They come back from Russia, he stated, in "frightful" physical condition, nearly starved. Their accounts of conditions in Russia are the ones which carry weight among the German people, Dr. Newman believed.

Prospects for economic improvement in western Germany are hopeful, the military governor declared. Markets appear to be available for an increased flow of German manufactured goods, and trading is already under way with 15 or 20 other nations.

The mild and wet winter has greatly aided the food outlook, he said. The forecast is for almost normal harvests this year, or some 40 per cent better than the disasterous crops of 1947.

A normal crop, Dr. Newman said, will provide Hesse—not primarily an agricultural area—with a diet of 1000 calories a day. The remainder—to bring the diet up to the basic minimum of 1550 calories set by the occupation government—must be imported.

Dr. Newman departed yesterday for his Wiessbaden headquarters.

House to Commence Debate Today on Year of Foreign Aid

ting the United States into the World Health Organization of the United Nations.

But yesterday it acted quickly after Chairman Charles A. Eaton (R., N. J.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee had said, in answer to a question, that the chances of war were "not very remote." Eaton pictured the United States as facing "an eventual attempt to conquer the world."

"Russia," he said, "has come down like a glacier through the Baltic states and now is threatening Finland and other Scandinavian countries. They won't stop until they come up an economic force—military force if necessary—that will stop 'hem."

15 Hours of Debate

The committee promptly cleared the bill for 15 hours of general debate starting today. The debate is expected to go on until the House recesses for Easter on Thursday night; then on Easter Monday, it will open for amendments, under a promise from Speaker Martin of a vote before April 1.

Wide differences between the House and Senate were in prospect over the House decision to combine all foreign aid programs into a single bill, and especially over the Foreign Affairs Committee's proposal for 150 million dollars' military aid to China.

The House Committee brought out a long report on its bill in which it drew a parallel between the Communist attack in China and in Greece.

"China, like Greece, is torn by civil war supported by resources outside the country," said the committee's report. "In China, as in Greece, domestic political reform and economic recovery had become nearly impossible unless a minimum solution of military security could at first be found.

"Much of China, like Greece and Trukey, has the character of a frontier region, covering a more important area whose independence is in the interest of the United States."

The report conceded a distinction between economic and military aid, in China as well as in Greece, but in a controversial passage it said this:

"The distinction is essentially the same as the distinction between the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan, or between a fence and a corn field. It is equally as valid for China as for Europe."

Approves Fund for China

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, on the other hand, yesterday approved a separate bill for 463 million dollars' aid to China without specifically calling for military assistance.

Its separate bill called, first, for "immediate aid to China to relieve human suffering and to afford the people of China an opportunity to initiate measures of self-help necessary to rebuilding the bases for more stable economic conditions." Thus it made plain that the bill was an outright relief measure and authorized 363 million dollars for this purpose.

It then authorized an additional 100 million to be appropriated to the President, "for additional aid to China through grants on such terms as the President may determine." Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg explained that this section could be used to provide military aid if the Chinese government wanted it.

The Administration has asked for 570 million dollars in strictly economic aid for 15 months. The House committee approved 420 million for economic aid and 150 for military assistance, both items tied into an over-all foreign aid bill. The Senate committee has cut these figures to a 12-month instead of a 15-month basis, separated them from European recovery by its language, and has declined to put China on the same footing as Greece.

The House committee report warned that without the total foreign aid program "the very survival of the United States would be more seriously at stake than at any other time in its history."

As for Europe, the report and the House bill rejected many proposed conditions to be attached to American aid. It argued, for example, that the present bill should not require western Europe to form a defensive alliance or a political union.

"The union of Europe is a consummation devoutly to be wished," said the report. "But the impulse must come from the participants. It is inherent in the entire European Recovery Program that it is a gesture of encouragement to such an end."

This was exactly the position taken by Senator Vandenberg in the committee report and debate on the Senate side. In several particulars, however, the European House bill strayed far from the concepts behind the Senate's measure.

One of them, strenuously opposed by Vandenberg in the Senate debate, would require a year-by-year authorization for ERP. The Senate bill provided a four-year authorization, leaving yearly review to be carried out by the regular appropriation. Another difference, the biggest of all, is that the House bill combines all economic and military foreign aid measures.

To Enact Separate Bills

The Senate, at least, plans to go ahead and enact separate bills. Today, while the House is debating its combined measure, the Senate will debate a separate bill for 275 million dollars in military aid to Greece and Turkey. Later, but before the House finishes action on the over-all measure, the Senate will deal with the separate 463 million dollar bill for China.

If all goes according to schedule, the conference will then have three Senate bills and one House bill before it, with the job of reconciling them somehow before the Italian elections.

Marshall Will Attend Inter-American Parley

Secretary Marshall is going ahead with plans to leave this weekend for the Inter-American Conference which opens March 30, at Bogota, Colombia.

The State Department press officer, Michael McDermott, told reporters yesterday that Marshall intends to remain throughout the conference, which may last six weeks.

Troubled relations with Russia had prompted some officials to speculate that Marshall might call off the Bogota trip or cut short his stay.

U. S. to Stay In Berlin, Clay Asserts

Berlin, March 22 (AP).—Americans intend to stay in Berlin, Gen. Lucius D. Clay repeated today. This was the United States military governor's blunt response to a Russian boycott which virtually halted four-power government of Germany.

The boycott was accompanied by renewed suggestions in Russian-controlled newspapers that the western powers get out of town. Clay said:

"We are in Berlin by agreement, just as the Russians are in Saxony and Thuringia (territory conquered by American troops) by agreement. We intend to stay."

Although there were no official statements it was known the British and French also are equally firm in their determination to ride out the four-power occupation of Berlin.

The Russians have boycotted all scheduled four-power meetings of the Allied Control Authority.

The Russians abruptly walked out of the Allied Control Council meeting Saturday. Today they advised that they were too busy to attend any of the nine scheduled meetings at the Allied Control Authority building.

Tomorrow's meeting of the coordinating committee also was cancelled. Made up of the four deputy military governors, that committee is the second highest Allied governing body for Germany. It ranks just under the Control Council and prepares the council's agenda.

Because the Russians hold the chairmanship of the Control Council and all committees this month, they can cancel meetings at will.

The Soviet boycott did not extend to the Allied Kommandantur, the four-power governing body for the city of Berlin. Working committees of that agency were holding regular sessions.

Trieste Proposal Welcomed by Italy

Rome, March 22 (U.P.).—Italy accepted with warm thanks today the proposal of the western Allies that Trieste be restored to her and Count Carlo Sforza, foreign minister, accused Yugoslavia of repeated violation of international law in the area.

In a note delivered to the United States, British and French governments, Italy informed them of her readiness to join with them and Russia in drafting a protocol on Trieste for consideration and action by the United Nations Security Council.

Italy's note called the proposal "a useful contribution to that collaboration with Yugoslavia for which Italy has always hoped."

Yugoslavia Assailed

But while the note written over his signature spoke of collaboration, Sforza in a speech attacked Yugoslavia bitterly and accused it of seeking to annex outright the southern zone of Trieste which it occupies.

In his first direct attack on the Yugoslavs since he has been for-Marshal Tito of a series of illegal acts in Trieste, including seizure of eign minister, Sforza accused industries, suppression of individual liberties and denial of freedom of the press.

At Milan, Italian police and troops broke up a fight tonight between rightists and 250 Communists demonstrating against the Western Powers for "provoking" Yugoslavia.

Strike Trieste Papers

The entire country was without newspapers because of a Nation-wide 24-hour strike by printers in which editorial and other employes joined. Only the Vatican City newspapers, Osservatore Romano was available.

Union leaders ordered their men back to work in time to get out Tuesday morning's papers. However, printers north of Florence decided to stay out.

One thousand key employes of the state court of accounts, whose five-day strike threatened to leave government employes, widows and war pensioners without their pay for March, agreed to return to work when the government promised to consider their pay demands.

In Pravda Article

President Accused of Panic Policy

Moscow, March 22 (AP).—Pravda said today President Truman's address to Congress last week reflected "panic policy" and an effort of his administration to artificially inflame international relations.

The official Communist party newspaper carried the first published comment here on Mr. Truman's appearance last Wednesday before a joint session of the Congress.

(Mr. Truman asked Congress for temporary revival of the draft, universal military training and quick approval of the European recovery program. He charged the Soviet Union with seeking to prevent world peace.)

In an article signed by the Commentator M. Marinin, the Communist newspaper said Mr. Truman made the speech because his election managers "demanded fire and brimstone, anti-communism and war hysteria" as a means of diverting the American people's attention from domestic economic difficulties.

The commentator said the Presidential message showed that "ruling circles in the United States, seriously alarmed about internal difficulties as well as by the growth of the forces of democracy throughout the world, are now losing their balance and trying to find a way out, a means of artificially inflaming international relations.

Airmail to Italy Doubled Recently

New York, March 22 (AP).—Airmail to Italy has more than doubled during the last few days. It has reached a daily volume as high as 114,000 pieces, Postmaster Albert Goldman said today.

Postal officials believe the increase is due largely to Italian-Americans writing to relatives and friends to combat Italian Communist pre-election propaganda.

12 Flood Specialists Sent to Psnnsylvania

Te Red Cross announced yesterday it has sent 12 disaster specialists to the flood area in Pennsylvania.

The 12 new workers were dispatched from Alexandria, Va. They were in addition to 34 extra Red Cross disaster workers and nurses now aiding tornado victims in Ohio and Indiana.

proved by the Big Four powers and incorporated into the Italian peace treaty, the Free Territory of Trieste was split into two zones. One is occupied by American and British forces and the other by the Yugoslavs. Trieste itself is under British-American control.

Friction has occurred along the frontier, and Italy and Yugoslavia have never been able to agree on a free state governor, whose nomination would have to be approved by the United Nations.

U. N. Protest Not Planned

Simic said his government did not contemplate putting its protest against the three-power proposal on Trieste before the United Nations.

Notes delivered to the Ambassadors of the United States, Britain and France said the proposal "makes no mention of the need of agreement on the part of the most directly affected allied state—Yugoslavai."

Marshal Tito's government was especially put out because it was excluded from the proposed talks on the 400-square mile Free Territory. These would take place between the three powers and Russia before any recommendation would be made to the U. N. Security Council on Trieste.

Said the Yugoslav note:

"This way of acting lends reason to the thought that the aim of this proposal is not seeking a better solution of the Trieste question and the normalization of relations between the peoples of southern Europe, but has a propaganda character and does not contribute to the strengthening of peace in the world."

The three-power action in making the proposal public prior to the national elections in Italy April 18 drew criticism.

Such action, said the Yugoslav note, "can serve only the fomenting of Chauvinist hatred toward the Yugoslav people and, on the other hand, toward the sharpening of internal political relations in Italy, and neither are in the interests either of the Italian people itself or the strengthening of peace in this part of Europe."

British Reaffirm Plans to Leave

Finns Object To Communist Mobile Police

Helsinki, March 22 (U.P.).—Four right wing political parties complained to the government today that only Communists have been recuited in the Finnish mobile police and that the police have failed "outrageously" to protect citizens from "disturbances by Russian-like elements."

In their complaint, made officially in the form of an "informative address" to the government, the right wing parties asked:

"Is the government aware of efforts, made to exchange the police staff and make promotions on the ground of the political opinions of those concerned, and that the police authority to a great extent has been given to people who do not belong to the regular police?"

This last question concerned reports that abous 5000 Communists have been equipped with police badges and authority to help the regular police in event of election campaign disturbances.

(Complaints by Czechoslovak parties that their police were being communized led to the leftist coup in that country.)

The informative address was drafted by the Agrarians, Conservatives, Liberals and Swedish People's party. It was filed formally in parliament.

Helsinki, March 22 (AP).—President Juho K. Paasikivi today promised that Finland's parliamentary elections next July will be free. He also predicted that there will be no war in th enear future.

Asked about fears expressed by some Finns that the coming elections might be postponed, the president answered:

"We will have elections in the legal fashion and there will be no question of postponing them. We are living in a country under legal order and according to our constitution. The elections will be totally free and the wil lof the people will be the deciding factor."

Finnish Delegation Received by Molotov

Moscow, March 22 (AP).—Foreign Minister C. J. A. Enckell of Finland, Vice Foreign Minister Reinhold Svento, and Cay Sundstrom, Finnish Minister to Moscow, were received today by V. M. Molotov, Soviet Foreign Minister.

The arrival earlier today of the Finnish delegation to negotiate a friendship treaty with the U. S. S. R. brought a large turnout of Moscow's diplomatic corps.

nek's charges. He said the former delegate was spurred into giving "cheap lies by the instigators of a new war."

Houdek insisted Benes was a free man.

"Country after country on the confines of the Soviet Union has succumbed to the rule of a ruthless Communist minority," Cadogan said. "The events proved that these parties took their orders from Moscow. The circumstances and the technique are always the same.

"What happened . . . in Czechoslovakia had happened before in Romania, Bulgaria, Albania, Hungary and Poland. In a number of these countries Russian troops had been in occupation while the Communist minority seized and built up power."

Cadogan said that since the inauguration of the Marshall Plan, "Moscow seems to have given orders to increase the pace."

The initial Soviet retort came from Vassily A. Tarasenko, delegate of the Soviet Ukraine. He countered with a charge that the western powers, specifically the United States, had plotted to oust Communist Premier Klement Gottwald from the Prague government.

Civil Police Exchange Fire With Yugoslavs

Trieste, Free Territory, March 22 (AP).—The American Military Government announced tonight that a patrol of civil police of the Anglo-American zone was fired upon by Yugoslav police at the border between the two zones this afternoon. One policeman was wounded.

The military government said a routine foot patrol of Venezia Giulia police, clearly within the British-American zone of the Free Territory, was fired upon with machine guns by a patrol of police of the Yugoslav zone.

The Venezia Giulia patrol returned the fire with their pistols.

Czechs Arrest Two Priests Ousted by Reds

Prague, Czechoslovakia, March 22 (U.P.).—Two priest-statesmen ousted from Communist Premier Klement Gottwald's cabinet were arrested at a small airport near Prague while awaiting "a foreign plane circling overhead" to take them out of the country, the interior ministry announced today.

The announcement said "several persons of foreign nationality" also were taken into custody at the airfield. It was not immediately known whether Americans were involved.

Plane Did Not Land

The "foreign" plane did not land, the ministry said, because "nationalist workers" were on a job near the airstrip.

Announcement of the arrests followed a statement by Interior Minister Vaclav Nosek barring from future elections all persons who have "offended" the new "people's democracy."

The priests, seized early yesterday in an airport shed 20 miles west of PrUague, were Msgr. Jan Sramek, war-time premier of the Czechoslovak government-in-exile, and the Rev. Frantisek Hala.

The communique said the priests were carrying large amounts of Czechoslovak and foreign currency when arrested.

The action committee of the Catholic people's party expelled Monsignor Sramek "because of his attempted escape abroad." Father Hala was expelled March 6.

Both Worked With Benes

Monsignor Sramek was vice premier and Father Hala minister of post and telegraph in postwar coalition governments. Both worked closely with President Eduard Benes and the late foreign minister Jan Masaryk, who recently committed suicide leaving, and that he would see him again today, at a stag luncheon.

Monsignor Sramek, 78, formerly was head of the Catholic People's Party and Hala was a party member. They served in Gottwald's cabinet until February 25, but were not named in the new government following the Communist coup.

Michael said there was no mention during his talk with Truman of setting up a Romanian government-in-exile here.

"We all hope I shall go back" to Romania, Michael said, adding that the President had told him he shared that hope. The White House had no comment on the former King's statement.

Silent on Romance

Michael so far in his Washington stay has declined comment on his romance with Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma.

Tonight, Michael and his mother, Queen Helen, are to be dinner guests of the British Ambassador and Lady Inverchapel at the British Embassy. Today, Michael will be entertained at a stag luncheon in his Shoreham suite, given by Secretary of Commerce W. Averill Harriman.

Present at the stag luncheon will be Secretary of State Marshall, Interior Secretary Julius A. Krug, Agriculture Secretary Clinton Anderson, Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall, Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan, Secretary of the Air Force W. Stuart Symington, Gen. Carl Spaatz, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Assistant State Secretary Norman Armour, Frederick B. Lee of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, Mirces Ionitziu, Michael's private secretary, and Alexander Cretzianu, his one-time representative to Turkey, and son of a former Romanian Minister to Washington.

Tomorrow, Michael will be guest at a 12:30 luncheon given by the National Press Club.

After his four-day Washington stay, Michael and his mother plan to go to Detroit to study American automobile manufacturing methods. Their American tour is expected to be completed early in April.

Navy Denies Ships In Mediterranean Carry Atom Bombs

By The Associated Press

The Navy said emphatically yesterday that none of its ships in the Mediterranean is carrying atom bombs.

It officially denied statements made by Representative Arthur L. Miller (R., Nebr.) in a speech at Lincoln, Nebr.

Miller told a Republican luncheon it is "common knowledge" in Washington that United States naval vessels in the Mediterranean are carrying atom bombs. He added that "most of our ships" are in that area.

In reply, the Navy said that only 15 United States combat ships are in Mediterranean waters out of a total 276 such vessels in the United States fleet.

"Not one of them is carrying an atom bomb," the Navy said.

Greeks Report Big Victory

Athens, March 22 (AP).—Minister of War George Stratos said tonight Greek troops have scored a smashing victory over guerillas in the regions of Mount Olympus and Mount Pierra in the past month.

The war minister said guerilla losses had been more than 1000 against 166 casualties for the National forces. Large stores of supplies were seized.

Stratos said the army had killed 95 guerillas and captured 31 during the past three days near the Bulgarian border.

The peak of electric streetcar development in the United States came in 1917 when more than 80,000 street railway cars were operated on 45,000 miles of track.

THE SWITCH ON PALESTINE

Editorial from The New York Times March 21, 1948

There can be little doubt that the partition of Palestine is being blocked by the struggle between the Soviet Union and the Western Powers. A land once known for milk and honey now flows with oil, and the homeland of three great religions is having its fate decided by expediency without a sign of the spiritual and ethical considerations which should be determining, at least in that part of the world. Ancient Palestine was once described as "not the land of philosophers but the home of prophets." It would take a prophet sitting on a rapidly spinning turntable to have foreseen the course which our Government has pursued during these last few months.

Three things need to be said, and to be said at once, concerning the present shift of American policy on Palestine. The first is that it comes as a climax to a series of moves which has seldom been matched, for ineptness, in the handling of any international issue by an American Administration. The second is that it is a plain and unmistakable surrender to the threat of force. And the third is that it holds little promise of being able to avoid the very hazards which it is intended to circumvent.

So far as the first point is concerned, it may be said that all of the critical considerations now enumerated by Mr. Austin as reasons for our Government's change of policy—namely, the strength of Arab opposition to the partition plan, the necessity of providing a large international armed force to implement that plan, the reluctance of the small nations and all of the large Powers, with the sole exception of Soviet Russia, which has its own objectives in the Mediterranean, to provide that force—were inherent in the situation when the original decision in favor of partition was made last Nov. 29. Nevertheless, it was primarily on the initiative, and under the pressure, of our Government that the decision for partition was adopted. Somewhere along the line there has been a shocking lack of liaison and of common purposes between the American State Department and the American delegation in the United Nations, with the White House itself apparently utterly at sea. Inept, uncertain and confused, the prestige of American foreign policy has suffered a severe blow in the handling of this issue.

As for the second point—the surrender to the threat of force—it is obviously and admittedly Arab intransigeance that has forced the American Government to change its policy and to bow to Arab threats, and to propose that the whole United Nations retreat with us in the face of Arab scorn and fury. Unfortunately, if this is done, it will not be the first time that the United Nations has had to yield to the threat of force. It has been bludgeoned out of Northern Korea by Soviet Russia and out of the Balkans by Soviet Russia's satellites, but each surrender of this kind is a blow to the authority of the United Nations. Meantime, we have played a shabby trick on the Jewish community in Palestine, which put its faith in our promises.

Finally, where does this new decision leave us? It leaves us still under the inexorable necessity of helping to furnish that international armed force which we have been so reluctant to provide. For to maintain what Mr. Austin describes as a "temporary trusteeship" over the whole of Palestine will certainly require an armed force. It may well require an even larger armed force than would be required for partition, for, as Secretary General Lie notes, the United Nations Special Commission on Palestine drew the conclusion that "a trusteeship for Palestine would be fought by two parties instead of one." This is the prospect with which the whole series of moves now culminating in Mr. Austin's announcement leaves us.

Gov. Warren Urges 'Make or Break' Plan

California Executive Says U. S. Should Protest to U. N. on Russian Aggression

Lincoln, Nebr., March 22 (U.P.).—Gov. Earl Warren of California said tonight that the United States should lead a "make or break" protest to the United Nations against Russian aggression.

Warren, a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, said the action would halt aggression, or would break up the United Nations organization.

But, he said he believed a "more unified and more effective organization" would be formed if the protest broke up the UN.

First Major Address

Warren, in a speech prepared for lican founders day celebration delivery before a Nebraska Republhere, made his first major political address outside his home State since announcing his candidacy.

"Small democratic nations that love freedom as we do . . . are being gobbled up by a powerful neighbor as ruthlessly and as oppressively as the Nazis ever operated—and in greater numbers," he said.

Much of this has been made possible, he declared, by "appeasement and changing policy" of the national administration.

"Is it not about time, for us to put the United Nations to a test? Should we not submit to it fairly and squarely, without fear of consequences, the great problem of the day—aggression?"

He said he thought the protest would end aggression rather than break up the U. N., "because no country can stand the scorn of unified world opinion."

Wants Action

"But even if it should mean a breaking apart and reorganization of the United Nations," Warren said, "I would accept that rather than watch Europe become subjugated piecemeal, while we sit at the Council table with the aggressor and piously recite the principles of the United Nations charter."

He said, however, he was sure that another organization would be formed "if one nation blocks out present effort and destroys its machinery."

The California Governor declared that the Democratic Administration had for years "backtracked and vacillated in our foreign policy until we are now fast approaching a crisis."

Republicans in Congress had attempted to cooperate on foreign policy, Warren said, but added it was "impossible for an Administration as inbred as this one to harmonize its own party, much less to understand cooperation with outsiders."

"It is not natural that they should regard as an intrusion the offer of a new Republican majority in Congress to help them make policy as well as execute it," he said.

Says Party "Tired"

Warren declared the Democratic Party is "tired" and "breaking up."

If it is retained for another term, he predicted, it will break into at least three parties—"The Wallace party, the party of the South and the party of the big city machines."

He compared the present situation to that in pre-civil war days when the Republican party was founded.

"The Republican party saved the union once by bringing unity out of convulsive chaos," he said. "It is now, almost a hundred years later, called upon to bring order out of organized chaos."

Warren said he favored a foreign aid program "from the standpoint of common humanity as well as from enlightened self-interest." He said no one knew how much it would cost, but aid should be given "at such times and in such amounts as will assure reasonable promise of success, but without injuring our own economy."

Black Market Hit as Army Changes Scrip

Fankfurt, Germany, March 22 (U.P.).—The United States Army suddenly changed its occupation money throughout the world in a surprise move aimed at wiping out currency black markets from Frankfurt to Tokyo.

The first news of the drastic change came here at 4 a. m. when soldiers were routed out of bed for an unusually early reveille and informed they would have exactly 8 hours to change their old script for the new.

Other Army personnel were given the news by telephone. They were told "old" money still in their pockets at noon would be worthless.

This is the third currency change in Germany in the past 18 months. The first was made in 1946, when special occupation money was introduced to replace standard American currency as legal tender. The script was changed again in March, 1947, for currency of a new design in an antiblack market move.

(In Tokyo, the Army announced today the change-over was being made simultaneously throughout the world, wherever military currency is used. The move was kept secret until the last minute so illegal holders of occupation currency would be unable to unload their hoards.)

Press Is Hit For World Pessimism

Geneva, Switzerland, March 22 (U.P.).—Benjamin Cohen, assistant secretary general of the United Nations, said tonight that false emphasis in the world press on spectacular clashes between the United States and Russia is partly to blame for world uncertainty and pessimism.

Cohen, a chilean, who heads the U. N. department of public information, complained "practically no information is given to people about the constructive work which the United Nations and its organizations have been able to achieve.

"Thus, to a large number of people, the United Nations is nothing but a forum where two great nations speak about their differences and conflicts.

"It is untrue to say that the world has no other thought but that of war. All the peoples of the world want peace.

"There is no reason why different political philosophies cannot coexist just as different religious and races coexist."

The International Conference on Freedom will open at 11 a. m. tomorrow in the League of Nations assembly hall. Nearly 600 representatives from 55 to 60 nations will be present.

U. S. Policy On Palestine Criticized

The United States reversal of policy on the partition of Palestine was attacked in both the Senate and House yesterday. Some House members defended the move.

Senator Ives (R., N. Y.) told the Senate the action may have "tragic" effect on the future of the United Nations.

He called for "plain speech" by the Administration on its move to shelve partitioning and substitute a temporary U. N. trusteeship over the Holy Land.

"I know that this wabbly, catch-as-catch-can, will-'o-the-wisp policy does not represent the character of the American people," Ives added.

Representative Helen Gahagan douglas (D., Calif.) told the House the withdrawal of support from the partition plan was a "betrayal of the faith of people everywhere in our leadership." She also termed it a "severe blow" to the United Nations.

Representative Celler (D., N. Y.) called it "wicked."

But Representative Hoffman (R., Mich.) replied that "it appears the American people are getting tired of going to war for minority groups."

And Representative Rankin (D., Miss.) praised the action as "a revival of righteousness."

Representative Isaacson (ALP., N. Y.), who was elected with the backing of Henry Wallace, attacked the policy change and demanded a congressional investigation.

He also urged recognition of the Jewish state being organized in Palestine and the lifting of the embargo on shipment of arms to the Holy Land.

Representative Folger (D., N. C.) arose to voice regret at what he termed "extreme remarks." If this country made a mistake in the Palestine situation in the first instance, he said, all the President can do is correct that mistake.

Representative Holifield (D., Calif.) complained that "blind leadership" in foreign affairs is hurrying the United States into another war.

Another Democrat, Representative Dorn of South Carolina, suggested that former GI's be given a chance to shape foreign affairs and "the cocktail sipping diplomats" be thrown out.

Representative Marcantonio (AL., N. Y.) accused "the Wall Street banker clique" of controlling United States foreign policy. The United States, he said, must take the lead in enforcing the original United Nations decision on Palestine.

Focused on Labor In Czechoslovakia, Gibson Testifies

Assistant Secretary of Labor John W. Gibson said yesterday Communists are using labor unions to gain control of free European nations.

This was done, he said, in Czechoslovakia. And he predicted similar attempts in France and Italy despite previous rebuffs.

"The Communists are concentrating their attacks on the labor unions," he told a Senate Appropriation Subcommittee.

"They recognize that organized labor is a powerful furce in the world today. The transformation of Czechoslovakia from a country governed by freely elected officials to a Communist-controlled totalitarian state is ample evidence of this.

"Communist agitation in trade unions is taking place in other parts of Europe as well. We have seen how the series of strikes and acts of sabotage carried on by Communist-led unions in France and Italy in the fall of last year resulted in serious losses in production.

"Fortunately in both countries the forces of democracy were sufficiently powerful to thwart the abortive attempt to seize power.

"But the Communists assuredly will not cease their efforts in France and Italy. On the contrary, by their statements we have been warned they will intensify their efforts."

Gibson appeared before the committee to urge it to restore nearly four million dollars which the House cut from the Labor Department's budget.

constable was killed and another injured when a mortar shell exploded near the police headquarters.

In an attempt to halt the developing battle, British troops fired at Jews and Arabs alike. Sniping broke out throughout the city. An Associated Press correspondent telephoned that squads from Haganah, the Jewish militia, were roaming the streets challenging Arabs gathered in coffee houses.

Arab press reports said 60 Arabs were killed and 100 wounded by British shells during the fighting at Hartuv.

A Haganah source said the Arabs were repulsed twice there this morning and last night. During the afternoon the Arabs resumed the attack.

Jewish reinforcements have reached the settlement, one of the oldest Zionist agricultural colonies in Palestine.

ville were awash, but the flood waters in those areas were reported falling.

Several main highways in the northwestern part of Pennsylvania were flooded. High water forced 150 families from their homes and closed four industrial plants, idling about 5000 workers.

Warren, Pa., was nearly isolated. The city's general hospital was surrounded and boats were the only access.

Eastern Canada was hit hard. Hundreds were forced from their homes as ice jams forced rivers over their banks.

Wingham, Ont., counted more than one million dollar damage from the swollen Maitland River.

The Mississippi, threatened a serious flood at Quincy, Ill. The river reached 21 feet, 7 feet above flood stage, and was still rising. Workers were attempting to reinforce one eight-mile-long earthen levee which was in danger of giving away.

Cleveland residents were cleaning out cellars flooded by a torrential rain. The storm caused damage estimated at one million dollars, including $60,000 worth of damage to the city zoo.

Many residents of Cleveland's East Side were forced into upper stories of their homes last night by an overflow from Euclid Creek. Hundreds of motorists were stranded by the high water and took refuge atop their cars until the flash flood abated.

Writer to Appear At Luncheon

MARGARET WIDDEMER

Queen Operated Upon

Athens, Greece, March 22 (U.P.) Queen Fredericka of Greece underwent an appendectomy today. Her condition was reported satisfactory.

Miss Widdemer to Speak at Book Luncheon

Maragaret Widdemer, whose novel, "Lani," appeared last month, will be one of four guest speakers at the last of The Washington Post's book and author luncheons this season at 1 p. m. April 7 at the Statler Hotel.

Miss Widdemer has published 35 books and numerous poems and short stories. While still in her teens she penned the best-selling novel, "The Rose-Garden Husband."

Since 1940 she was written "Constancia Herself," "Andela Comes Home," "Lovers Alibi," "Some Day I'll Find You," and "Lani."

"Lani," a story of missionaries in Hawaii and the New Hebrides, is the first book in which she has used real incidents and actual historical characters as the basis for a story.

Educated at home by her grandmother, Miss Widdemer likes to say that she has "never been in any institution of learning except to lecture or to receive a degree."

Widely known as a poet as well as a novelist, she has served on the executive board of the Poetry Society of America. Her novels are noted for their combination of facile story-telling and true character protrayal.

Former Postmaster General James A. Farley will also speak at the luncheon. His book, "The Roosevelt Years," was published March 1.

Tickets for the luncheon are available at book stores at $3 each.

NLRB Requests Injunction Against Printers' Union

The National Labor Relations Board yesterday submitted to a Federal judge a proposed temporary injunction to stop what it termed the "no contract, closed-shop" policy of the International Typographical Union.

The draft injunction was laid before Federal District Judge Luther M. Swygert, in Indianapolis, by NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham. It would force an end to the ITU's current strikes—principally against Chicago newspapers—and require the union to bargain for written contracts. These would have to run for a "definite term," presumably a year or more.

Thus the injunction, if issued in the form recommended by Denham, would prevent the union from following its present policy of seeking contracts that would be subject to concellation after 60 days. Another provision in the injunction would prohibit arrangements with employers that provided, in effect, for a closed shop.

In a supplemental memorandum to the court, Denham charged the ITU's policy was "unilateral action which is the bane of industrial democracy and insists that the price of peace is capitaulation." What the union really seeks from publishers, he continued, is no contract at all, but a continuation of the closed shop.

The closed shop, providing that only union members may be hired, has no legal sanction under the Taft-Hartley Act.

that the arbitrator, as well as another official to administer the agreement, was to be chosen by Fleming himself.

Fleming, who entered the dispute more than a month ago on White House direction, said he had already selected these men. He promised he would reveal names today, saying "one is in my immediate office and the other in one of the Federal Works divisions."

The remainder of the agreement, it was learned, follows the lines suggested 3 weeks ago by George E. Strong, conciliator appointed by Fleming. Strong's proposal was accepted by the union and considered reasonable by Fleming, but GSI balked at having Strong decide the cases of disputed relative efficiency.

Other provisions of last night's agreement include the 6½-cent hourly raise that GSI gave to all workers who stayed on the job and all new employes. The agreement is to run through 1948.

The agreement, it was further learned, does not bind GSI to negotiate with Local 471 for a new contract of wages and working conditions.

The issue that touched off the walkout January 5 was the corporation's refusal to bargain until officers of the union and those of its parent, United Public Workers of America, swore they were not Communists. The local union complied under protest. The Taft-Hartley Act requires a non-Communist oath before a union may be eligible for any National Labor Relations Board services.

Fight 40-Hr. Week

Commercial Printers in N. Y. Go Out

New York, March 22 (U.P.).—Some 4000 printers in commercial print shops quit work today to protest an increase of their work week from 36 and one-quarter hours to 40 hours at straight-time pay.

The walkout started shortly after 8 a. m. when the printers reported for work and found their employers had not removed signs posted March 11, notifying them of the lengthened work week. They said they considered this action a lockout and left their jobs. Only a few shops were being picketed.

At a 90-minute meeting today the Printers League section of the New York Employing Printers Association said its members had voted unanimously to keep the notices on their shop bulletin boards until the union negotiated a contract.

The printers, members of the International Typographical Union, AFL, Local No. 6, are demanding a raise in their minimum wages from $80 to $100 a week for 36¼ hours of work. The city's 247 commercial printing houses have offered the man an increase of 10 cents an hour, contingent on union acceptance of a longer work week.

Less than 300 of the 4200 printers worked today, and they were on the job in shops which had removed the work notices.

Fifty shops are independent and do not belong to the Printers League.

After the employers' meeting this afternoon, Don Taylor, executive vice president of the Employing Printers' Association, said the strike has almost completely shut down the New York union shop commercial printing industry.

Ship Loaders Refuse To Cross Picket Line

Russian Freighter Tied Up Awaiting Cargo Of Machinery That Might Be Used in War

Jersey City, N. J., March 22 (AP).—AFL longshoremen refused today to cross a war veterans picket line marching in front of the Soviet freighter Chukokta being loaded with United States manufactured machinery.

Sixty-two members of the International Longshoremen's Association stopped before the Hudson County Catholic War Veterans picket line and went into an impromptu meeting to decide whether to resume loading the Russia-bound machinery.

Thomas Carlin, president of the CWV and leader of the pickets, said "this is the little peoples answer to Uncle Joe's statement that the little people in America favor communism." He said his group was seeking a Nation-wide boycott on all shipments "which might be used in war against us."

Police Capt. Thomas Dunn, in charge of a police detail at the docks, said the meeting of longshoremen was underway and nobody as yet had reported as stevedores aboard the ship.

Carlin said his group had asked the ILA to call its stevedores off all Soviet freighters in American ports.

Twenty-five pickets—23 veterans and two members of the women's auxiliary — marched yesterday alongside the 10,000-ton vessel, which is being loaded with tractors, farm and industrial machinery, automotive parts and other material destined for the Soviet Union.

Truman Urged to Stop Shipments to Russia

By The Associated Press

President Truman has the "power and responsibility" to prevent shipment of war material to Russia and should do so, Representative Cole (R., Mo.) said yesterday.

Cole told the House he had reports the Russian freighter Chukotka was being loaded at Jersey City with "potential war materiel, tractors, automotive and farm equipment, consigned to the Soviet Union."

Chairman Weichel (R., Ohio) of the House Merchant Marine Committee said $282,000 worth of industrial machinery is being loaded at Jersey City, N. J., for shipment Russia. He told the House it is inconsistent for the United States to take economic steps against Russia on one hand and supply her with need equipment on the other.

Such shipments, he said, should be stopped.

Back-to-Work Plan Fails

together meanwhile and try to "activate" the fund.

It now amounts to more than 30 million dollars, but it is dormant, owing to the inability of Lewis and Van Horn to agree on terms of a pension plan for over-age miners.

John Owens, one of the miners' three representatives of the conference, was quoted by Ching as having this to say on the suggestion:

"The United Mine Workers representatives have given very serious consideration to the proposition made by Mr. Ching and will report it to our associates. Personally, we're not inclined to recommend its acceptance."

Ching would not reveal the reasons they gave for turning the proposition down, and the union men would not comment themselves.

The operators released a statement which they addressed to Ching, declaring that the cause of the strike action by the miners was a disagreement between the trustees of the welfare fund. The operators have no control over that group, they declared.

"With a contract in existence," their statement continued, "we reiterate that we will not enter into collective bargaining on any subject until the miners are back at work and then only on the subject of valid grievances of national character."

They declared, however, that this was not inconsistent with their acceptance of Ching's proposal, in that its first point—and the prerequisite to future collective bargaining—was a return of the miners to the pits.

Unless there is an entirely unexpected response today from Lewis, it appeared that the White House would have no alternative but to apply the national emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

This would begin by the appointment of a factfinding board to study the strike issues. Then, when that group made its report, the Government could seek an injunction against the strike of some 350,000 coal diggers.

Meantime, the congressional committee which acts as a "watchdog" over the new labor law scheduled a meeting of its members for today to see what if anything they could do. The meeting was called by Senator Ball (R., Minn.), committee chairman.

Train Cuts Cause Little Trouble Here

Hundreds of Washington commuters had to change their travel schedules yesterday, but the inconvenience was relatively minor, according to railroad officials.

It was the first day of reduced runs—eight in all affecting Washingtonians—under an Office of Defense Transportation order cutting steam-operated train service by 25 per cent because of the coal strike.

An official of the Baltimore & Ohio, whose service was principally affected in this area, announced that extra coaches have been added to other trains to care for travelers who normally take the six cancelled trains.

The other two cancelled trains are on the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac. The line reported in difficulty.

A spokesman for the Pennsylvania Railroad announced that it may have to eliminate the Bowie race track train due to the ODT order. The train is scheduled to start running next Monday.

Denver, March 22 (AP).—Representative Johnson (R., Ill.) said today Great Britain recently shipped 500 locomotives to Russia.

"That's where our billions are going," Johnson said, "and that's another reason why I definitely will oppose the ERP as proposed when the final vote is taken."

Amazing new way to relieve nausea of

MOTION SICKNESS

Most people suffer from "motion sickness" in one form or another. When the motion of a boat nauseates you, it's called seasickness. On a bus or in an auto, it's known as carsickness. In an airplane, it's airsickness. Once accepted as hopeless . . . there's wonderful, good news coming out of the medical world today.

IT'S CALLED TRIP-EZE

It's an amazing new preparation. Army and Navy doctors put these ingredients together during the war to combat air and seasickness. Now it is sold commercially. You chew this medicated gum as an aid in preventing and relieving this ancient malady. It proved effective as a preventative in 95% of the cases reported.

Chew Trip-eze before boarding the plane, bus, train or boat. Over thirty airlines, American and foreign, accept Trip-eze to aid in preventing and relieving airsickness.

Your druggist now has a new supply. Money back if Trip-eze doesn't help you.

Half Billion Voted For Emergency Aid

By the United Press

The House yesterday approved a $555,125,000 bill carrying emergency funds for foreign aid, tax refunds and relief for needy Indians.

The measure was passed unanimously and sent to the Senate shortly after it had been recommended by the Appropriations Committee.

The biggest item, 500 million dollars for tax refunds, prompted Democrats to chide the Republicans over their tacit admission that the GOP took too big a bite out of Treasury funds in last year's "economy" drive.

Representative Albert Gore (D., Tenn.), said the Republican's chief economy claim was that they had saved 800 million dollars last year by knocking that amount off the Treasury's request for tax refunds.

"Not a single dollar was saved," he observed.

Representative Clarence Cannon (D., Mo.), said the Republicans pushed through the cut knowing that all or most of it would have to be restored.

"Now the chickens have come home to roost."

Representative Everett Dirksen, Ill.), defended the GOP, saying the Treasury up to that time had refused to offer "one iota of evidence" to substantiate its claim that the 800 billion dollars was needed.

The Appropriations Committee said the question of restoring the other 300 billion dollars will be considered in another bill to be studied soon.

Second biggest item in the bill is 55 million dollars in stop-gap relief funds for France, Italy and Austria. It was provided to meet the "urgent needs" of the three countries pending enactment of the European Recovery Program.

The remaining $125,000 is earmarked for relief of needy Indians.

To Discuss School Budget

Senate Votes Tax Slash

Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), James E. Murray (D., Mont.) and Spessard L. Holland (D., Fla.).

With Democrats to his left and right deserting to the bill, Senator Tom Connally (D., Tex.) led the last day's fight against the cut. Connally argued that UMT, temporary revival of the draft and increased outlays for the air force will require big increases in spending. He said the United States must keep itself financially strong to maintain its security.

Still At War, He Says

"Senators talk as though the war was over," Connally shouted. "I wish it was, but we're still at war."

Senate Finance Chairman Eugene D. Millikin (R., Colo.) conceded "perilous days" are ahead but said tax incentives will help build the "healthy economy" needed to meet any world emergency. If tax increases later become necessary, he said he would help to raise them.

"Let us take a calculated risk for the benefit of the people of the United States," he concluded.

Beginning with Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), one former foe of tax reduction after another announced their intention to support the bill. Morse offered seven modifications "for the record" but said he would vote for a cut even though they were defeated because the country wanted tax reduction.

Standing with Connally in the dwindling band of Democrats opposing any tax reduction now, Senator Carl A. Hatch (N., Mex.) said foreign aid and militray preparedness programs will cost "many millions if not billions," adding:

"I am not willing, on the one hand, to say to the American people, 'I give you tax relief,' and on the other vote for these huge expenditures."

Would Look Beyond November

In a similar speech against the cut, Senator Francis J. Myers (D., Pa.), said the Senate should think "of the next year, and the next five years, rather than the November elections."

In the wholesale defeat of all modifying amendments, just before the final vote, it was Senator Pepper who called up the President's proposal to allow $40 tax credits for all. When that was thundered down by a voice vote, Pepper proposed that the total tax against any individual be limited to 50 per cent of his income, instead of the present 77 per cent ceiling. That went the same route.

'Porthole' Murderer Gets Death Sentence

Winchester, England, March 22 (U.P.).—Deck Steward James Camb, 31, was sentenced to death today for the "porthole murder" of Actress Eileen (Gay) Gibson, 21. He dumped her nude body into shark-infested waters off Africa October 18, and she hasn't been seen since.

It marked the first time in approximately 200 years a first degree murder verdict has been returned by a British jury without the existence of a body as proof of a slaying.

Jones Appointment To CAB Confirmed

The Senate confirmed yesterday the appointment of Harold Armstrong Jones of California to a six-year term on the Civil Aeronautics Board. Action was be voice vote.

Also by voice vote, it confirmed appointments of:

Oscar Kent La Roque of North Carolina, to be a member of the Home Loan Bank Board for the remainder of a term expiring June 30, 1949.

John Taylor Egan of New York to be public housing commissioner.

Day May Bring Key Decision About Rents

Senate-House conferences on rent control extension may decide today whether to recommend continuation of Federal control over rent ceilings.

The conferees were in session most of the day yesterday but Chairman Charles W. Bobey (R., N. H.) said the conference decided not to take up the key mater—local board versus Federal control—until today.

Present controls expire in nine days. The Senate group is unanimous in opposing the House measure stripping the Federal Government of veto power over rent increases.

Tobey said if the conference could not reach agreement on a version more like the Senate bill there would be no rent control. He added that he believed the conference could come to some agreement.

Minor differences in the two bills were reconciled yesterday. In the House group Representative A. S. (Mike) Monroney (D., Okla.) was substituted for Representative Wright Patman (D., Tex.) who had to be out of town. The substitution of Monroney, a strong supporter of the Senate measure, was regarded as enhancing the possibility of agreement with Federal controls.

Harry Dye Appointed

Appointment of Harry M. Dye, 2811 S. 13th st., Arlington, as first aid instructor has been announced by W. W. McCollum, chairman of the Arlington County Red Cross. He succeeds Sherman Johnson, who has resigned.

Mother Accused of Killing 4 Children

Chelmsford, Mass., March 22—(U.P.).—An unmarried mother, her income cut off by the death of her elderly lover, hired an automobile and used it as a makeshift gas chamber to asphyxiate her four illegitimate children, police said today.

Police accused Mrs. Evelyn Craven Roche, 34, who survived the fumes that killed her two sons and two daughters. She is held for observation.

"I didn't know what to do," she said today. "I was alone in the world with my four children and had no means of support and the only man I could ever care for was dead. I decided the children and I would be better off if we could join him."

"There's an ounce of insulin, Doctor"

It takes the pancreas glands of 1,500 cattle or 7,500 hogs to make an ounce of insulin—the substance upon which more than one million Americans with diabetes depend for health and even life itself.

Insulin is available to these people only because the meat packing companies carefully save all of these glands. There is no other source. Meat packers save many other materials used to make dozens of medicines that are essential to saving life, prolonging life and keeping people healthy. They are used in heart cases, shock, anemia, pregnancy, and general surgery.

You may never need any of these products, but you still benefit by them. The meat packer covers most of his expenses by saving and selling glands, hides, hair, bones and non-food fats that might otherwise be wasted. That is why your meat-man can buy beef, for instance, delivered to his store for less than it would cost him to dress it himself.

Shoes to soap. Meat industry by-products make many things we need, help pay cost of meat industry service and contribute to profits which average only a fraction of a cent a pound.

Meat college. American Meat Institute Foundation at the University of Chicago, supported by the meat industry, seeks new and better ways to process meat products and by-products.

No need to buy a pig to buy a pork chop. The meat is divided into convenient wholesale cuts which your dealer orders as needed. Thus he is able to keep his stock fresh and varied.

Fast and clean. Perishable meat must be sold quickly. Yet there is no waste because the meat packer delivers meat, under refrigeration, to where it is needed—when it is needed.

Montgomery Hears Of Spraying Plans

If Heat Continues

Cherry Trees May Blossom By Thursday

Cherry Blossoms will be bustin' out all over the Tidal Basin by Thursday if the temperature continues to sizzle in the 80's.

If the mercury roams in the low 70's, as the Weather Bureau yesterday expected, blossoms should be out for sure by Easter Sunday, so Harry T. Thompson, assistant superintendent of National Capital Parks predicted yesterday.

Either prospect might lessen chances of full-blown blossoms for the annual cherry blossom festival scheduled for April 10 and 11.

However, the Board of Trade's festival committee is hopeful of slipping temperatures which would slow the Tidal Basin blooming till festival time.

At any rate, double blooms, which come out later, should decorate Hains Point by the tenth.

Meanwhile, early varieties now are in full glory at Hains Point, behind the former Japanese Embassy, and at Washington Circle.

Alleged Record Falsifying Probed

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—Chairman Daniel B. Chambers, jr., of the Baltimore Board of Election Supervisors said today it is investigating reports that registration records have been falsified.

Chambers reported the investigation has been going on for a week and a staff member went to Lebanon, Pa., to verify official records.

The board chairman said he had been advised by Attorney General Hall Hammond to disclose no other details of the case.

It was learned a clerk in the supervisor's office is suspected of receiving $200 for altering some of the registration records.

Summer Program Announced by County Agent

Details of a comprehensive insect control spray program for this summer in Montgomery County were announced yesterday by County Agent O. W. Anderson.

Service being offered, Anderson said, included spraying of fruit trees, flies, fleas and lice, Japanese beetles, corn borer, weed and fence rows, lice and cattle grubs, whitewashing, and seed cleaning.

In their announcement, Anderson and President James D. King of the Montgomery Farm Bureau, appealed for county-wide cooperation which they said, would afford continuous use of equipment and thus lead to lower charges for the services.

Fruit-tree spraying this year, Anderson said, will include five sprayings, one during the dormant period, one at the preblossom stage, and three cover sprays. The fifth spray is aimed at Japanese beetle control.

Meanwhile, a count of Japanese beetle grubs currently "wintering" in the soil indicates an infestation equally as great as last year, Anderson said.

All roads and streets will be sprayed on either side as part of a $15,000 Japanese beetle control program this summer. The Farm Bureau will also spray rows of soybeans around corn fields at the farmers' expense.

Anderson said farmers may request the corn borer spraying service.

Md. Taxes Up Third Over '47

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—Maryland's coffers are filling up about one third faster this year than they did last, State Comptroller James J. Lacy reported today.

He said he collected $82,982,381 the first eight months of the current fiscal year.

The new sales tax produced $15,073,588 through March 1. The original estimate was it would bring in $18,500,000 for the year.

Also responsible for the big increase in tax collections are big jumps in gasoline and income taxes. The former increase from $9,622,474 to $12,390,519, and the latter from $2,767,327 to $5,183,000.

Taxes from alcoholic beverages dropped from $5,110,705 to $4,291,996.

Policeman Slayer Attempts Suicide

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—Warden Charles P. Price reported today that Roy Arnold Wood, convicted slayer of a Baltimore policeman, had been thwarted in an attempt to hang himself at City Jail.

Wood, a 24-year-old bricklayer from Whitehall, Md., faces death or life imprisonment for killing Patrolman Joseph D. Benedict on February 13.

An appeal is pending.

Price said Wood had made a noose of his necktie "and was just getting ready to hang himself," when discovered. Wood was removed to the infirmary and put under restraint.

VMI Cadets to Attend Unveiling of Statue

Lexington, Va., March 22 (AP).—Virginia Military Institute will be represented at the unveiling of an equestrian statue of two Confederate generals in Baltimore in May.

Maj. Gen. Richard J. Marshall, VMI superintendent, announced today that 340 cadets from the institute will attend the ceremonies. They will compose three provisional companies and the corps band. The cadets will appear in full dress uniform.

The statue will be unveiled in Baltimore's Wyman Park on the seventy-fifth anniversary of the parting of Gens. Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson shortly before the Battle of Chancellorsville.

The memorial of Lee and Jackson is the work of Laura Gardin Fraser and was donated by the late J. Henry Ferguson, a Baltimore banker.

Laurel Man Cleared Of Manslaughter

Harry S. Allen, 52, 329 Prince George st., Laurel, Md., was acquitted on charges of manslaughter at a hearing in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie.

Technical charges of manslaughter had been placed against Allen following death of Walter Henry Guffin, 72, of New York City, who was struck by Allen's car March 11 on Baltimore blvd. near Lackawanna st., Hollywood, Md. Witnesses said that Guffin had run in front of Allen's car while crossing the boulevard. Mrs. Guffin saw her husband run across the street from their parked car but did not see the actual impact.

Man Routed by Girl Pays Assault Fine

Stocky, 190-pound Edison F. Etchier, 32, was put to rout by a 109-pound former girl Marine early Monday during a comic holdup attempt, made a shame-faced appearance in Municipal Court yesterday.

He was originally booked on three counts of assault with intent to commit robbery. The Government nolle prossed these charges and substituted one of simple assault. Judge Ellen K. Ready found Etchier guilty of simple assault and he paid a $25 fine.

The girl who bested Etchier was Miss Melbt M. Carroll, 24, of 2209 40th pl. nw.

Safe Robbery Reported

Meanwhile, a $200 safe robbery was reported to police yesterday. Sometime during the weekend, cracksmen entered the Baumgarten Co., a firm which makes rubber stamps, at 925 11th st. nw., punched out the dial of a safe in the front of the store, opened it and removed $200.

Gerald Prizio of 1736 G st. nw. told olice he was the victim of an assault and robbery at 12:35 a. m. yesterday while walking on the Ellipse with two men. He said one of the men struck him on the jaw and then he was robbed of a wrist watch and a ring valued at $30.

Prizo, who was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a compound fracture of the jaw, said one of the men wore a sailor's uniform. He said he had met them recently, but did not know their names.

John Williigoose, manager of a Safeway store at 701 4th st. sw, reported his store was entered over the week end and 15 hams and 15 cartons of cigarettes valued at $134.95 stolen.

The cafeteria at Stuart Junior High School was entered over the weekend and 400 pennies and six dies stolen from a desk.

Somebody also broke into the principal's office at Merritt School, 50th and Hayes sts. ne, and stole a box of caramel candy from the principal's desk.

several fellow employes had been waiting on the 7th and P sts. northeast corner for a truck to take them to work when the incident occurred.

At about 2 a. m. on Sunday, Joe C. Jones, 23, of 1238 Walter st. se., was shot in the left side while talking with his brother and a friend on the same corner. He received treatment for a flesh wound.

Another lodger at the Salvation Army house, Thurman Shumate, was coming out of a bathroom next to Carraway's room at about 7 a. m. that morning when he thought he heard a shot or backfire. Shumate told The Washington Post that Carraway, who "would never let me get near him anyway," had started to open his door, but "shut it as quickly as he could," when he saw him.

As the door closed, Shumate smelled gunpowder, he said, and later he told Major Maurice Smith, assistant manager of the lodging house, about the occurrence. Police were notified and Detective Sergts. E. P. Hallman and H. H. McQuinn were waiting at Carraway's room when he returned from a Sunday outing at about 2 a. m. yesterday.

Carraway reenacted his sharpshooting tactics for police from the tawdry room which he has rented, off and on, for a year. He paid 60 cents a night for the room when he first took it, Major Smith said, but was paying the new price of 90 cents recently.

He told police, who found only 28 cartridges left out of a box of 50 he had bought, that he had "practiced" his sharpshooting several times, both from his bedroom window and from the bathroom window. The distance from his window to where the victims stood was about 100 feet, police estimated. The target angle was sharp, as Carraway's was the last room away from the corner, overlooking P st.

The sniper, who was described as a "soft spoken person who never bothered anyone" by fellow lodgers, was born in LaGrange, N. C., where his mother still lives, in 1919. Without relatives here, he has two brothers in Richmond, he said. He first told detectives his name was William T. Brown. He later explained that he had an uncle by that name who had considerable property, and he liked to use the name as his own "so people would think I had property."

He held a job at a Safeway grocery store for two years after he first came to Washington in 1941, he said, later becoming a car cleaner for Capital Transit and a pinboy for the Lucky Strike bowling alley, before he took up caddying.

Carraway declared he did not take drugs and did not drink much, "only a little wine now and then." An empty pint bottle with a muscatel wine label, and a fifth-gallon bottle with a port wine label were among his meager effects in the Salvation Army room.

Darkness At Richmond

Censorship through harassment of newspapers is a standard tactic of dictatorship. It has been tried in Italy and Germany and most recently by Gen. Juan Domingo Peron in Argentina. But it is astonishing to see it tried in the State of Virginia, the womb of freedom in the Western Hemisphere. The attempt is as inimical to American traditions as it is ill-advised.

The details of this attempt were recounted in a story that appeared in The Post on Sunday by Alfred Friendly. Because the renownedly courageous and independent newspapers of Richmond, the News-Leader and Times-Dispatch, were sharply critical of actions taken by the Virginia House of Delegates; that legislative body adopted a resolution directing the State Corporation Commission and the Attorney General to investigate the ownership of the publications, their profits, salaries and charges with a view to determining "whether or not it is deemed in the public interest that the only two newspapers of general circulation in the City of Richmond should be owned by one corporation."

Monopoly ownership is, of course, a serious problem in American journalism. But that the action of the House of Delegates is in no sense an effort to deal with this problem is evident from the fact that its resolution applies to Richmond alone. Monopoly prevails in every other Virginia city where a daily newspaper is published. This investigation is aimed, of course, not at monopoly, but at freedom of the press. It is a brazen, ugly form of intimidation and merits the condemnation of every Virginian devoted to American institutions.

Moral Commitment

Before the Senate passed the European recovery bill, Senator Taft declared that Congress was not obligated in any way, morally or legally, to continue the program in the second, third and fourth years. A pronouncement of this sort is calculated to do a great deal of harm by undermining the confidence of Europeans in the stability of purpose of this country. Incidentally, Mr. Taft unwittingly gave a wrong impression of his own attitude. For he subsequently admitted that "if conditions a year from now should be the same as they are now, if the recipient nations had cooperated and the program had proceeded" he would probably vote exactly as he intends to vote today—that is, for continuance of the program. In short, there is no fundamental disagreement between him and Senator Vandenberg, even though the Senator from Michigan recognizes an individual obligation to vote for continuance of the recovery program if participating countries meet the requirements laid down for receipt of aid.

Of course, everyone with an elementary knowledge of our political institutions realizes that no Congress can commit its successor to any legislative program. But stressing that fact seems to us to be most unwise and misleading, since there is no reason to believe that any future Congress would exercise its legal right to scrap the recovery program without good and sufficient reason. Moreover, the recovery program is, as Senator Vandenberg has pointed out, a partnership undertaking aiming at objectives desired by the United States as well as European nations. In extending aid to recipient countries to strengthen their economies we are at the same time building up our own economic and political defenses. Consequently, sudden abandonment of the recovery program, assuming that the aided countries cooperate in giving effect to it, would not only be an act of bad faith but would be contrary to our own interests.

There is more than a suspicion that Senator Taft's emphasis on the year-to-year aspect of the program reflects a deep-seated skepticism as to the prospect of successful functioning of the Marshall Plan, as well as a disposition to underrate the benefits to us of that plan. Obviously, if our hopes of speeding European recovery and arresting the spread of communism should be disappointed, abandonment of the recovery program would logically follow and a lend-lease program put in its place. In such case, no one would insist that the United States was under any obligation to waste its substance on an impotent undertaking.

China And The Chinese

There is less insensitivity to reality in the Senate Committee's bill than in the House Committee's bill for aid to China. The Senate has resisted those who want to give more military aid to Chiang Kai-shek's fighting forces than the aid that has been and is being provided for next to nothing out of surplus stores. What motivates the Senators is protection of the integrity of the Economic Cooperation Administration. However, the extra 100 million dollars to be given to the President for use in China at his discretion may be a hint to the President that use in supplying arms would not be amiss. Or it may be a sop to the House. The House allows outright 150 million dollars in military aid.

We still adhere to our feeling that such an appropriation would be wasted, and worse than wasted. The House says only one true thing about it. The arms, is says, "would go a long way." In the hands of the farm boys whom Chiang Kai-shek conscripts, and then throws into the fighting without training, American arms would, indeed, go a long way. They would go right across the enemy lines, along with the farm lads, and probably wind up in the hands of experienced Communist soldiers in Manchuria. In that event the United States, instead of fighting communism, would find itself subsidizing communism. And this at a time when projects essential to American livelihood are neglected—the foot and mouth disease menace in Mexico, MVA, and so on.

We had thought that with the Marshall Plan the end was announced of "Operation Rathole." Help for self-help became the national slogan—help in achieving economic recovery and thus combating the evil forces of international communism. To be sure, there is communism in China, and this Nation must be concerned with remedial measures. But we see nothing in the economic as well as the military appropriation which would aid the fight against communism. The Senators seem to appreciate this. They are honest enough to say that the 363 million dollars in economic assistance is for the relief of human suffering. The House, where the Chiang-aiders have focused their campaign, emits a cloud of words to justify its handout, which is 420 million dollars. But the House verbiage signifies nothing but the triumph of pressure group politics—which has anything but China as its object.

Let us think of China when we talk about China and of the American taxpayers when we talk about aid. A long time ago we mentioned the possibility of beginning reform of the hyperinflated currency of China by the introduction of silver coins out of the American hoard. This would have been a way of repairing the wrong that the United States did to China when it forced that country off the silver standard. But such a plan was apparently too constructive to consider. If the silverites could take their noses out of the Treasury trough long enough to recognize where their long-term interests lie, they would have been in the forefront of a "silver for China" campaign. However, the cause of making American help count in China is not yet lost. If by aid to China is meant help for the Chinese people, then the services of the man who has come to be known as "Yen of China" should be enlisted. He is James Yen, who for a generation has been fighting illiteracy in China with his People's Education Movement, the movement of the thousand characters. He has such a sense of dedication, such a love for his fellows, that he comes close to the Confucian ideal of a gentleman, the "superior man." Lately he has been in this country appealing for the setting up of a Sino-American Commission on Mass Education and Rural Reconstruction. If the money to be voted for economic aid to China were put into this project, it would not be wasted.

Surely there should be no need to press the point that ideas can be beaten only by better ideas, not by arms. This can be appreciated by bearing in mind the survival of Christianity—which kept alight even through the Dark Ages. In China communism thrives because, as the Chinese put it, the heart of the people has been withheld from the national government. The people no longer trust it. Literally hundreds of China's educated youths from schools and colleges have braved danger and "eaten bitterness" to make their way to Yenan. It follows that, if aid is to be given to China, it must be aimed at the restoration of the people's faith. Help in achieving basic livelihood and education, health and self-government in Chiang's own territory by a nongovernment, international agency would be the best anti-Communist prescription we can think of.

Light On Contributions

On several occasions The Washington Post has pointed to the evils arising from the anonymous solicitation of funds from the public. Organizations may pretend to collect funds for wholly legitimate purposes and then spend the proceeds for wholly illegitimate ends. We were naturally delighted, therefore, when Morris L. Ernst, a member of the President's Civil Right Committee, came out some months ago for a law that would require all organizations soliciting funds from the general public to publish their membership lists and render a financial accounting as to the sources of their funds and the nature of their expenditures.

"My faith," Mr. Ernst said, "is in the free marketplace of thought, from which I deeply believe that the truth will emerge the victor. I believe that if democracy meets the Klan or communism in the marketplace, democracy will triumph. But the marketplace is no longer free when competitors may enter it anonymously and fight democracy while they hide under the cloaks of democracy." Communists, he reported, got behind the fund-raising for the Scottsboro boys accused of rape some years ago and collected perhaps a million dollars. The cost of defending the case was $60,000. Presumably the balance, or a large part of it, went to support Communist causes. This case is typical of many others.

In the recent Barsky case the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia took note of charges that the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee was ostensibly collecting funds for relief and actually using them to disseminate political propaganda. Officers of the committee were convicted of contempt of Congress for refusing to produce their records before the Un-American Activities Committee. In our opinion it should not be necessary for any committee of Congress to inquire into the collections and expenditures of any such organization. Those facts should be open to public inspection by law. Communist-front and Fascist-front organizations have been able to flourish precisely because they have been able to operate in the dark. If their cause will not bear the light of day, they have no right to be collecting funds from the American public. We hope the Congress will not neglect this important problem.

Palestine Turnabout

Palestine, which last October France's delegate said was "most particularly urgent," is now to go back to the General Assembly for reconsideration. Mr. Austin proposes that the U. N. partition plan be shelved and the area put under a temporary U. N. trusteeship, rather than let nonaction create a vacuum in Palestine when the British pull out on May 15, and offer a temptation to Soviet Russia. The proposal, which will doubtless be accepted, is at least an honest recognition that nothing can be accomplished by reliance upon present means.

Partition with economic union, which conformed with the majority report of the U. N. Palestine Commission, was recommended last November by the Assembly. In view of the widening gulf between Arab and Jew and the clash of their cultures—there seemed no other solution in sight—just as there was no other solution in the cases of Ireland and India. We still feel it would have been realized if action had been swift and resolute. The United States voted for the Plan, and, moreover, envisaged enforcement as well as—contrary to what Mr. Austin said last Friday—piecemeal implementation. But no enforcement was forthcoming, even diplomatic. On the contrary, all effort in the State Department and outside it seemed to be dedicated to the task of junking the U. N. decision. American diplomatic officers stayed in Washington instead of going back to their posts in the Middle East in order to wage the campaign. Thus the Security Council, to which the enforcement issue was referred in February, found itself confronted with American noncooperation. Conciliation was then tried, but only in a half-hearted way, and without the aid of the British or the Russians, who declined to join in conciliation. For the time being, therefore, there was no option but to confess that the task was impossible.

Of course, the United States knew this when in February it communicated to the Security Council its decision not to enforce partition. And the other nations knew it. All the fol de rol from February 24 on was an American maneuver to scuttle partition—and it added farce to tragedy. The effect was that faith in America's leadership and in America's moral position was rapidly being undermined in the United Nations.

Both leadership and moral position are badly in need of repair, and this task must now engage all Americans of goodwill. One way would be to take the lead in settling the DP problem for good and all at the same time that the Assembly is shelving the partition plan. The other way would be to lay by the heels the whole Mufti gang in Palestine. As long as the Mufti, one of Hitler's closest collaborators, is allowed to tyrannize over the Arabs in Palestine, no Arab moderate will be able to live, let alone negotiate. The men who staged the anti-British riots in the 30's, and became Nazi agents during the war, are now running affairs in Arab Palestine, and they must feel confirmed in their intransigeance.

Negotiation of a settlement, presumably, will be the on-the-spot goal of the trustees, who, with Soviet Russia outside the Trusteeship Council, will probably be Anglo-American. The two powers also have a common interest in safeguarding their strategic, i. e., oil interests in the Middle East. Both considerations require a friendly population in the Middle East, Jews as well as Arabs. The Palestinian Jews, who served the Allied cause well and most helpfully in both World Wars, will not cooperate if they are allowed to believe that intransigeance is the only road to satisfaction. The Arabs may or may not cooperate. They never have; and reports from the Middle East say that the initial jubilation over the Austin speech has given place to hedging. It is evident that in handling both Jews and Arabs the trustees will need more troops than would have been necessary for implementing the partition plan!

It is still our belief that one of these days the problem is bound to make our policy-makers wish they had grasped the nettle, instead of setting it aside. At any rate, the same "hopeless indecision," in Mr. Churchill's words, which was exhibited at the last attempt at solution in 1937, had this effect upon the British. In that time Palestine has grown from a local to a world problem the ominousness of which cannot yet be gauged. It is always later in Palestine than is realized in the foreign offices, and it is so late now that, by the time the new decision is underwritten by the U. N., there may be a whittling down of trustee willingness to do more than hold Jerusalem.

Work Or Fight

Senator Vandenberg's friendly dissent from President Truman's urgent plea for universal military training undoubtedly will be exploited by those conspiring against national unity. Yet Senator Vandenberg's patriotism, realism and statesmanship are above suspicion.

Both the Senator and the President wholeheartedly subscribe to George Washington's wisdom: To be prepared for war is one of the most effective means of preserving the peace. They agree upon the end that the peace must be preserved and aggression resisted. They honestly disagree as to the method that dependably will eliminate risk and miscalculation.

Preservation of the peace will depend upon bipartisan statesmanship perfecting the method upon which there is substantial agreement. This means adapting Selective Service to a critical national emergency about which there is no rational dispute.

If UMT is to be bypassed then equity demands its basic principle of total contribution by all with immunity or special privilege to none be incorporated in Selective Service. This means adopting a national policy in times of emergency of work or fight.

Selected Service must be amended so that workers are compelled to share in the total discipline and sacrifice of those in the armed forces. A national emergency which requires the draft of soldiers by the same justice should require a no-strike edict by Congress for the worker. Unless this is done Selective Service may not fill the dangerous void left in our master plan for national survival should UMT be bypassed.

Presidential Troubles

Those friends of President Truman who are discouraged by the constant declaration of his foes and some newspapers that he has lost ground and is bound to be defeated, should read this story and take courage:

In the summer of 1864, President Lincoln was ready to issue a call for a new draft for a half million men. The war had not been going too well and the discouragement throughout the North was overwhelming. Everyone was taking it out on Lincoln. The pressure on him was terrific and many wise men lost their heads and advised him to get out of the race.

When a delegation called on the President and asked him to recall the demand for the draft he replied, "It matters not what becomes of me . . . If I go down I intend to go down with my colors flying."

Came Grant's failure at Cold Harbor and in the attack on Petersburg. Louder became the cries that it was really Lincoln who had failed the country. Wade, Davis and others issued a "manifesto," and Greeley published it and it sensationally called the Administration a failure.

Said the New York Herald on August 14 of that year, "The dissatisfaction which had long been felt by the great body of American citizens has spread, even to Lincoln's supporters." Then Greeley, David Dudley Field and a group of highly influential New Yorkers called on Lincoln to withdraw from the presidential contest. They called a Union Party convention for Cincinnati, announcing they would name another candidate rather than Lincoln.

Thurlow Weed (the astute politician) said to Lincoln: "You cannot be reelected." Lincoln's closest friend wrote him, "There is but one report, the tide is setting strongly against us."

Enough to scare any man. But Lincoln stood firm and said, "The Administration intends to stand undivided and to prosecute the war."

It really seemed that Lincoln was the most unpopular man in America and that his chances to be reelected were utterly lost. Think of all this in the light of history—for Lincoln was triumphantly reelected.

Isn't there a lesson here for the scared politicians who are denouncing Truman and declaring he has no chance to win?

Economic Planning

Marquis Childs' March 17 column, "Uncurtailed Monopoly," effectively criticizes the pigeonholing in House Rules Committee of the Kefauver bill to prohibit the buying of the assets of a small corporation by a large one. The bill should be brought to a vote, but it is a futile attempt to turn the clock back.

Combination is necessary, and therefore inevitable. Nearly every small business is a member of some trade association, or wants to be—to get the benefits of planned production and distribution, plus the profits—but to escape the penalties and odium of monopoly.

America is old enough to shed its economic diapers and realize that pulverized production and distribution are not economic. The growth of the cooperative movement, and the rapid increase in business failures attest this. Of course private monopoly is indefensible and any enterprise which is to be efficiently and economically conducted must be publicly owned.

The world is moving fast toward a mixed economy, public ownership of natural resources, natural monopolies and basic industries, cooperative ownership, and private ownership, all planned for public welfare. We are wisely accepting the judgment of the 16 nations involved in the European Recovery Program that they must plan their economies. Economic planning is just as necessary here, and the fewer managements, the more effective will be the planning.

Hemispheric Aid

In his column of March 16, Sumner Welles was quite right in stating that "we failed to seize the opportunity to make of the European recovery plan a hemispheric rather than a purely United States program."

To keep the record straight, however, it should be added that Latin American export surplus, particularly those of Argentina, are to be brought into the European Recovery Plan through the mechanism of off-shore procurement. The dollars thus made available in payment for Latin American exports to western Europe will revive to some extent the functioning of multilateral trade, taking the form of a triangular relationship of western Europe, Latin America, and the United States.

This method of Latin American cooperation does not take the place, however, of a real hemispheric program in connection with European and world recovery and in which the United States showed a positice interest in the stability and development of the economies of Latin American countries. We have not, in other words, given vigorous attention to making Latin American cooperation in our foreign-aid program a broad-guage project.

By concentrating on the Communist threat in Europe, I hope we haven't missed the boat as regards what should be the most effective direction of our foreign-aid program—world recovery.

Civil Rights Support

So often the cry "Keep the church out of politics" succeeds in Time zone at midnight and then silencing the clergy, that we who are set apart to be "faithful dispensers of the Word of God" can become individuals who are spiritually numbed and insensitive to social injustices. Let this not be said of us in the present case of civil rights. The government of men is designed to defend civil rights and not to abrogate them under the deceiving words of "States' rights," or "institutions and traditions of the South."

Let us not confuse civil rights with the sacred cause of States' rights. No clergyman should cheapen his sermons by carrying the political implications of this matter into the pulpit, nor need he be concerned about the personalities involved and their political ambitions, but he must point out to his congregation the sin of stripping people of fair and equal opportunities to fulfill the personality and the abilities which God has given them. The denial of these fair and equal opportunities is a denial of God's purpose in history.

Also every clergyman can encourage those statesmen who are trying to use their wisdom and strength to serve man and to serve God. At this point I believe we must stand side by side with these men in the defense of what our religion teaches us to be the truth.

Mrs. Noyes' Memory

I have read the gracious letter of Mrs. Charles E. Russell which appeared in your columns on March 1. I appreciate her complimentary references to me but, in justice, I should say that the interest that I have shown in Washington is due to that really distinguished citizen, the late Mrs. Frank B. Noyes. I came to Washington with an amateur's interest in architecture and city planning that I have always had, but I was so busy, from the very beginning, that, if it had not been for Mrs. Noyes, I am afraid that I, too, like so many others, would have been content to "let George do it."

During my time in Washington, Mrs. Noyes was the greatest force here along the lines in which Mrs. Russell also appears to be interested. She knew her city and she loved it. From the day when she first called on me in my office, to enlist my interest in helping to right some wrong that she fought to redress, I saw much of her and I was always glad to be called upon for anything that I might be able to do. Fortunately, there were occasions when I could help because the Department of the Interior had the necessary jurisdiction.

I was glad to follow Mrs. Noyes' lead. From the time that I first knew her she was struggling against bad health. But she was never daunted, even after she had lost her highly promising son who was so dear to her. When, at last, she had to take to her bed, it was my privilege, on occasion, to go to see her whenever she called. Up to the day of her death she valiantly kept up the fight in which she had voluntarily engaged herself on behalf of her city.

Mrs. Noyes' loss was an irreparable one to Washington. The influence that she was able to bring to bear in behalf of her city no longer makes itself felt. At times, others have exposed themselves to the taunts and jeers to which, fortunately, she was immune, although they would not have daunted her. And so I am glad that Mrs. Russell feels moved to compliment me for the little that I have been able to do in memory of Mrs. Frank B. Noyes.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Target: Palestine

TWO OF the Republican candidates have assailed the Administration for reversing the decision to partition Palestine. The others can be expected to join in, since the target is irresistible.

The late Hugh Johnson once described one of his innumerable enemies as a revolving blankety-blank-blank, by which he meant that the enemy was a blankety-blank-blank from every conceivable angle. The Administration's Palestine policy is similarly a revolving, self-perpetuating mistake.

That is why the target is irresistible. It can be attacked from any angle.

The most obvious angle is that of the pro-Zionists and their friends who now cry betrayal. Their cry has the searing force of truth. It was less than six months ago that the United States took the lead in behalf of partition.

Those who have always believed partition to be unwise and unworkable can now ask the reason for what, in their opinion, was the first error. It has meant six months of delay and confusion, sharpening and intensifying the Palestine tragedy.

SURELY the consequence of the decision for partition should have been foreseen. The United States, having forced that decision, should have been prepared to accept the consequences.

But the target at which Republican attack will be directed is even broader than this. It is the lack of a carefully coordinated policy carried out by men who are playing on the same team.

During his years in the White House, Franklin Roosevelt was inclined to balance off opposing forces within his own Administration. The expedient and the political were weighed against the vital and essential. The boss, himself, came out with the final compromise which was meant to reconcile the extremes.

The resulting compromise was usually workable, and now and then it had the brilliant inevitability of political genius. We know, however, that in the last year or two of Roosevelt's life this political improvisation was inadequate to the terrible problems of the war's end. In spite of the chronic hysteria of his critics, whether anyone could have done better is an open question.

MR. TRUMAN inherited the Roosevelt approach, as he inherited the opposing forces in the Administration. Yet he had none of his predecessor's capacity to reconcile these opposing forces and arrive at a workable compromise.

He has talked from time to time about team play and the agreement essential to a coordinated team. This is his explanation for getting rid of the New Dealers he fell heir to. Yet in Palestine we have the most glaring example of a push, first in one direction and then in the opposite direction.

At the time of the decision for partition, a number of influential policy-makers continued to talk and to work against it. They were determined to bring about a reversal.

That they would succeed was obvious after Warren Austin presented his first evasively worded statement on Palestine a month ago. They argued that reversal was necessary to maintain America's strategic position in the Middle East.

Whatever the practical benefits, and the coming weeks will tell, the United States has lost heavily on the moral and political side. Division at home is increased, and doubt is spread abroad as to our purposes and our will to carry out these purposes.

The best that can be said for Mr. Truman on Palestine is that he recognized his error, in the light of swiftly worsening world conditions, and reversed it. If that had actually been the case, then he might be entitled to credit for courage and candor. But that is not the way it looks to any objective observer.

Federal Employes

The recent publicity against Government employes is the rankest injustice I have ever encountered.

In the first place, the vast majority of Government employes have been underpaid and overworked for so long that at the present time many bureaus are understaffed and completely buried under work that cannot be done because of lack of personnel and particularly trained personnel. In the second place, those who work for the greatest and richest government in the world are constantly subjected to insults and scorn by Congressmen, citizens and the public generally.

The writer is employed by a Government bureau, the goat for the recent outburst of some of our Congressmen, and the particular division in which I am employed is badly hit by lack of personnel. For the last year and a half good, conscientious well-trained and result-producing men have been leaving the bureau because of overwork and poor pay and because their hides were not thick enough to take the constant abuse and ridicule of the public and Congress.

It seems to me that at this time when statesmen are needed so badly the members of Congress might well use their time and efforts in working out the important and dangerous domestic and foreign problems that face our country. And while working on these problems they might take into consideration that they have, by vilification and castigation, driven thousands of faithful, well-trained and conscientious workers out of Government service.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Diplomacy And Strategy

EVEN IF all the military measures now proposed were taken properly—selective service, universal military training, an expansion of the Air Force, a revival of military lend - lease to western Europe, and unhesitating support of the Italian government—the situation would not be in hand without a revision and reorganization of our diplomatic policy. Strategical considerations are now paramount in the test of power which the Kremlin has decided upon, and in the showdown which is coming. That means that we can no longer afford the policy of general containment by indirect pressure and inconclusive subsidies and indecisive intervention all around the vast periphery from Germany through the Middle East to China. For we can never be strong enough everywhere to make such a policy successful.

Lippmann

At the zenith of our military power in the Second World War, and when we had powerful allies, it was necessary to make strategical choices as to where our military effort should be concentrated. Today it is even more essential that we choose our positions which can be secured, and our power committed and invested, with the greatest economy of force and with the best prospect of exerting the greatest pressure on the Soviet Union itself.

OUR DIPLOMATIC strategy has to be fitted to the fact that we must cross the oceans before we can exert military pressure; to the fact that we can never hope to equal the military power of the Communist coalition; to the fact that our military superiority is in extremely complicated and cumbersome engines of war; to our command of the sea; and to the political realities—which are that in the whole periphery in Europe and Asia we are confronted almost everywhere with uncertainty and bad risks.

We cannot know how much the western Germans can be relied upon should Russia offer Germany the prizes and inducements that Russia alone can offer Germany. We may know what Chiang Kai-shek would like to do: We cannot count securely on what he will be able to do. We cannot have any firm confidence as to whether the Arab League would hold together, or what the states that belong to it would do, if they were put to the test, and had to deal with Stalin and Molotov rather than with the British Foreign Office and Mr. Bevin.

THEREFORE though the positions in western Europe were consolidated, the great periphery would still be soft and dangerous. Our present policy in this periphery is no more than a haphazard series of entanglements and improvisations, entered into without a strategical plan as a result of conflicting pressures within the State Department and Congress, and upon them. It is time that Secretary Marshall took the view that diplomacy under existing conditions is not a matter of international conferences and public relations but ultimately and essentially what it was when, as Chief of Staff, he played a leading part in the grand decisions as to when, where, and how the military resources of the coalition would be allocated and deployed.

For the conflict with the Soviet Union is now primarily a struggle for strategical advantage in anticipation of a military showdown. Whether the struggle will end in war may depend on accidents, intrigue, and provocation which no one in Moscow or Washington may be able to foresee or to control. But in so far as this strategical struggle is still controllable, the outcome will surely depend on what, when the showdown comes, is the balance of power.

IN REVIEWING our diplomatic policy our overriding interest is to avoid exhausting entanglements where no immediate action can be had, and to concentrate the greatest force at those selected points which can be made secure and can be used.

It is reasonable to ask ourselves, then, whether all things considered, Japan is not the most economical, reliable, and advantageous point at which to concentrate in the Far East. It is evident that the world conflict cannot be decided in China; China is much too remote from the vital centers of Russia and of the United States. Japan is a position from which Soviet Siberia, Manchuria, Korea and North China can be dominated by a relatively moderate investment of strategic air power. Japan is, we can assume, fairly and unquestionably in our hands. It would then appear to be wise to concentrate our effort there until the fundamental world conflict with Russia has been settled.

Germany, viewed as a problem of global strategy, cannot, I submit, be treated as a military asset. For there is no certainty whatsoever that a reconstructed western Germany would have any ideological qualms about making an alliance with Russia. The precedents of history and the logic of the present situation are a warning that this is precisely what might happen. The actions of the German Communists and of many German nationalists point unmistakably to it.

Therefore, though western Germany would be integrated into the European Recovery Program, both for the sake of Germany and of Europe, it should be our settled policy to be prepared for a political turnabout in Germany. It should be made quite plain to the German nation that if once again they make a deal with Russia, or even begin to make the first moves toward such a deal, this will be an act of aggression against the west which will be met by summary action. For though our ground forces could not hold the Red Army at the Elbe, it is quite within our power to make western Germany a military wilderness. What has been reconstructed with difficulty can be destroyed with ease. The knowledge that this is what we could and would do should suffice to offset the temptations which Russia can offer and the pressure which she can exert.

IN THE Middle East our main and immediate concern must be to make secure those selected positions from which we could not be dislodged, where we are not based upon the shifting sands of Oriental courts, chieftains, and politicians. These positions will evidently be those which are readily accessible by sea, the coastal regions of the Mediterranean and of the Persian Gulf.

They should be firmly secured and developed, no reliance being placed for supplies or military support upon the turbulent interior of the Middle East which is beyond the immediate reach of any military pressure we can exert except by long-range strategic bombardment. Concentration at selected points should enable us to hold the strategic approaches to southern and central Russia, and to deny to Russia any profitable exploitation of the oil or the politics or the geography of the Middle East.

All this would be a stern policy, to be undertaken only if we really mean what we say, that the situation is in fact so serious that it cannot be dabbled with safety any longer. The situation is unmistakably as serious as that. The stakes of the game are enormous, and it cannot be played successfully at this late stage without making decisions of the highest consequences, and at great risk.

Negro Rescued From Negro Mob In South Carolina

Columbia, S. C., March 22 (AP).—A husky 6 foot Negro railroad shop laborer was rescued from a mob of Negroes today shortly after, police charged, he lashed his 11-year-old son to death.

Richland County Coroner William A. Plott said a threatening crowd of more than 200 Negroes had gathered outside the home of Thomas Andrew White, 34.

"Only the arrival of the police cars averted mob action against White," Plott said.

Chief of Detectives William A. Rawlinson reported the 200-pound Negro, formally charged with murder, calmly admitted having tied up his son in the bathroom and beaten him into unconsciousness.

"He wouldn't tell me the truth," police quoted White as saying, about a one dollar bill the boy had collected yesterday. "I beat him and he wouldn't tell me."

Argentina Won't Sign Trade Pact

Havana, Cuba, March 22 (AP).—Argentina announced today it would not subscribe to the Havana trade charter.

The announcement came at one of the final sessions of the United Nations Trade Conference, which is to adjourn Wednesday after the final act is signed. Other nations generally indicated that, while the charter was not completely satisfactory, they would like to see it get a chance.

Senator Diego Luis Molinari, head of the Argentine delegation, said he was acting on "specific instructions of my government."

He said President Juan Peron had proclaimed the economic independence of Argentina July 9, 1947 "and never, at any time, will we ask previous authorization to trace the course of political conduct which the Argentine people should follow."

Court Asked To Deny Bail For Meyers

The Government yesterday asked the District of Columbia Circuit Court of Appeals to deny the petition of Maj. Gen. Bennett E. Meyers for release on bail.

Meyers, wartime deputy chief of air force procurement, is serving a sentence of from 20 months to 5 years for subornation of perjury.

The 52-year-old retired general was found guilty on March 12 of persuading a business associate, Bleriot H. Lamarre, to lie to a congressional committee.

Lamarre, who has pleaded guilty to perjury, was "dummy" president of a wartime subcontracting company. Meyers was revealed as the actual boss of the firm.

In a brief opposing the general's application, the Government pointed out that "bail may be allowed pending appeal . . . only if it appears that the case involves a substantial question which should be determined by the Appellate Court.

Finland's Fate

By Sumner Welles

Challenge For The United States

THE FINNISH delegation summoned by Stalin has now reached Moscow. Notwithstanding the limitations placed upon its powers by the President of Finland, it will be required to sign a treaty which would destroy the last vestiges of Finnish independence. With the conclusion of this chapter of Finland's tragic history, the pattern of impending events becomes quite clear.

The objective sought by the Kremlin is not new. It has formed a part of Soviet policy since before the defeat of Germany.

As early as February, 1945, Zhdanov, at that time chief of the Russian Control Commission in Finland, suggested such a pact to President Mannerheim. The President bluntly refused to discuss it. As a revealing sidelight on the methods of Soviet propaganda the Communist press in Finland has for some weeks been insisting that it was Mannerheim, and not Zhdanov, who took this initiative.

Later in the same year, Soviet agents in Finland again proposed a military alliance, this time to Juno Paasikivi, then Prime Minister and now President. The latter was noncommital. In the winter of 1947 in an effort to stem the tide, he declared, however, that, were Russia to be attacked through Finland, Finland would support the Soviet Union with all of the means at her disposal.

WHILE THIS declaration may have been expedient, granted the conditions the republic faces, it was nevertheless vehemently attacked throughout Finland. Anti-Russian sentiment is of course profound. And the Finnish people still hold to the illusion that they can adopt a policy of "Swiss neutrality."

The Communist Minister of the Interior, Yrjo Leino, who has during his brief term of office already transformed the Finnish police into Communist strong-arm squads, shortly thereafter announced that Finland would always stand at Russia's side whether in peace or in war.

A few months ago a delegation of Finnish Cabinet members visited Moscow on the anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. At that time the Communist-dominated Foreign Minister Enckell informed Molotov that the time was ripe for the proposed alliance. The Kremlin immediately sent General Savononkov, former vice president of the Russian Control Commission in Finland, as minister to Helsinki.

Since then, under his direction, the Finnish Communists have been trying through the radio and the press to soften up public opinion to prepare it for the treaty. The Communist-controlled Union of Finnish Popular Democrats has even demanded that the Finns, "out of gratitude" to the Soviet Union, should take the initiative in asking for such a treaty. Finally, on February 26, it was announced that Stalin had personally written to President Paasikivi demanding the alliance.

While 70 per cent of the members of the Finnish Parliament are bitterly opposed they have felt compelled at least to authorize negotiations.

IT IS doubtful whether the Finnish Parliament can refuse to ratify the treaty once it is signed if the western democracies remain silent. Yet if the treaty is ratified, the last chance for any form of resistance will have passed.

There is no legitimate security requirement that the Soviet Union can advance as justification for this destruction of Finnish freedom. By the terms of the peace treaty she signed last year, Finland is defenseless. Russian troops could occupy the entire country within two days. What the new treaty implies is that in the execution of a global policy of aggressive expansion the Soviet Union can thereby extend her military frontier to the Swedish border—to the Thorne River, the Gulf of Bothnia and the Baltic Sea.

To Sweden, to Norway and to Denmark the meaning of a Finnish-Soviet military alliance is unmistakable. It is the first notice of an approaching Soviet ultimatum. It warns of the coming demand that the three Scandinavian nations abandon any adequate system of defense, refuse incorporation in the western European bloc, and adhere to the Soviet Union's world policy.

The immediate issue is whether the obliteration of a free Finland is to proceed without let or hindrance. If so, the consequences are easy to foresee. Soviet pressure upon the Scandinavian countries will be relentless. Should Soviet hegemony be imposed upon Scandinavia, the security not only of western Europe, but of Canada and the United States, would be in immediate jeopardy.

IN 1938 the acquiescence of he western powers in the victimization of Czechoslovakia made the Second World War inevitable. Now a decade later, Finland offers western civilization a similar challenge.

The objectives sought in Mr. Truman's address of March 17 are admirable so far as they go. Under present world conditions our foreign policy is meaningless unless it is backed by adequate armed and economic strength. But of what concrete value to the countries in the shadow of Soviet aggression is the President's assertion: "I am confident that the United States will by appropriate means extend to the free nations the support which the situation requires."?

Only a joint resolution of the Congress of the United States can provide the positive assurance of military support that the European democracies so desperately need in the event of aggression or convey the warning required to halt further Soviet expansion. Without it there can exist no certainty of collective security.

Senate Group Votes 4 Hours Each in Anti-Poll Tax Debate

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Southern Democrats yesterday opened an apparently hopeless battle to prevent the Republican-controlled Senate Rules Committee from giving speedy approval to anti-poll tax legislation.

Pressing for fast action the Rules group voted to allow only four hours each to those opposing and those favoring the legislation.

Anti-poll tax legislation is part of the Civil Rights program proposed by President Truman which has provoked Southern Democrats into hot rebellion against their party's leader.

Angrily, the Southern Senators denounced the Rules Committee fast schedule, and claimed that anti-poll tax legislation is unconstitutional.

Sparkman Joins Attack

Headed by Senator John C. Stennis (D., Miss.), a group of Southern lawmakers denounced proposals for Federal abolition of the poll-tax as an unconstitutional interference with the rights of the States.

Senator John Sparkman of Alabama—one of the poll-tax States—told the committee:

"I hold no brief for a poll tax as such, but I say it is a matter for the States to decide—not the Federal Government. Federal legislation would be unconstitutional."

Faced with a tough reelection battle in Alabama, Sparkman, long regarded as an Administration middle-of-the-roader in Congress, has demanded that President Truman withdraw from the next presidential race in favor of General Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Governor William M. Tuck of Virginia, who sparked the anti-Truman fight over the civil rights program in Virginia, is scheduled to testify today at 10:30 a. m.

Albert A. Carmichael, attorney general for Alabama, argued that the only legal way to abolish poll taxes by Federal action is to amend the Constitution.

George H. Ethridge, assistant attorney general for Mississippi, said Mississippi's poll tax supports the school system, is only $2 a year and therefore "not burdensome."

Representative John B. Williams (D., Miss.) said Mississippi has been falsely accused of using the poll tax to prevent Negroes from voting.

"Those making such statements either are uninformed or are being malicious," Williams declared.

"In Mississippi we have 150,000 to 200,000 Negroes who are exempt by law from paying a poll tax. All persons over 60 and all war veterans are exempt."

Jesse F. Orton, a New York lawyer, said the bill "is as clearly and hopelessly unconstitutional as a bill would be which attempted to regulate marriage and divorce, a power not granted by the Constitution."

Sparkman raised the question of why there is so much concern over the poll-tax which applies only to seven Southern states and one other—Vermont—when others have property or literacy tests. Alabama's poll tax is $1.50 a year, Sparkman pointed out.

The Southern Democrats also said that a prohibition against requiring a poll-tax for those voting in a Federal election would still leave the States free to impose a poll tax in State elections, and "chaos" would follow.

Chicago, March 22 (AP).—Ernest D. Wallis, 34, a former army photographer, pleaded guilty today to stealing atomic bomb photographs from the Los Alamos, N. M., bomb project.

U. S. Attorney Otto Kerner, Jr., recommended that Wallis be given probation. The prosecutor said there is no evidence that the photographs were used illicitly. Judge Barnes continued the hearing until April 22 so that a probation investigation might be made.

Redeveloping Plan Criticized by Ihlder

Marshall Heights-Barry Farms Program Would Not Accomplish Purpose, He Says

John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority, yesterday criticized present plans for redeveloping Marshall Heights and Barry Farms—two of the District's most blighted areas.

He told a luncheon meeting of the Citizens Council for Community Planning, at the YWCA, that the "real purpose" of the redevelopment program would not be accomplished under plans drawn by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and the D. C. Redevelopment Land Agency.

As plans stand, he charged, only low-income groups now living in the two areas would be permitted to remain "and there will be no opportunity for low income people who today are living in the slums of Washington." This, Ihlder said later, would help to create in Washington "tenement slums" comparable to those on New York's East Side.

Ihlder said he was basing his views on one section of a broad set of "principles" adopted by the NCPPC and the Land Agency for developing the two areas. He quoted:

"No public housing will be favored in initial projects if private enterprise can provide proper housing of the types, costs or on the financial terms within reach of the present families in the area."

Maj. Gen. U. S. Grand 3d, chairman of NCPPC, and principal speaker at the meeting, emphasized that "we want to provide for the people who are living there first." And he claimed that the developments "will not and should not be all for low-income groups."

Eyewash, Grant Says.

Later, he called Ihlder's charges "eyewash" and said they were unfounded.

Louis Justement, local architect, disagreed with "both points of view." He claimed "you're sacrificing the whole basis of urban redevelopment to housing."

Mrs. William H. Wells, executive vice president of the Citizens' Council, pointed out that the Land Agency, created by the District Redevelopment Act of 1945, now has no operating funds.

Poland Mobilizing Two Million Youths

Jones Straight 'Man' Is a Diva

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE TOWN: Often lost in the pandemonium that accompanies Spike Jones' "Glow Worm" is the rather astonishing story of the soprano who's so raucously interrupted . . . For Ina Souez is a Denver girl who became one of the leading singers of prewar Europe . . . The famed Glyndenbourne (pronounced glideburn) company considered it bad luck if Miss Souez wasn't on hand to open and close its season with her favorite role, Fiordiligi in Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte." . . . Our Washington climate got her down last week and for the third time in her operatic career she had to cancel performances . . . But she's back on the National stage now . . . "Why shouldn't I be singing with Spike Jones?" asks Souez. "I'd far rather be singing than waiting around for something, and opera in this country is a very hard life to make any income from . . . I'd like to do radio mostly, for that's where most of our music is today, and how better to get a hearing than through Spike's enormous audiences? . . . I'm hoping he will let me do a serious moment with 'Claire de Lune' in the show; it would be good contrast for what comes later." . . . Married for three merry years to William Malcolm, a third cousin of the Queen of England, Ina went back to her singing because "that's what I've done ever since I can remember." She'd like to go back to Europe, but never for more than three months. . . . "The whole world's in a mess and I see no reason why I should be unhappy that I have to sing 'Glow Worm' against a foghorn accompaniment." . . . Anyone fond of classical music and the operatic world would get a bang out of talking with Ina; she sparkles with yarns about songbirds and conductors. . . . She was much interested in Paul Albright's letter about her one-time colleague, the fine German basso, Willi Domgraf-Fassbaender, whom Albright had heard two winters ago in Berlin. . . . It's a topsy-turvy world indeed when you get one of the most respected voices of our time battling with a Spike Jones foghorn. . . . Though it does prove Spike's point that "by golly, my folks are real musicians."

SIDNEY LUST is proudly announcing that Easter Monday he'll be holding his thirteenth Easter Egg Hunt . . . His theaters and the Kiwanis Club of Prince Georges County will be hosting 10,000 children at Magruder Park, Hyattsville, where 3000 boiled and dyed eggs will be hidden in the bordering woods . . . Sylvia Lichtenham, 12, of Hyattsville, will be Queen of the Hunt, crowned by Mayor Caesar Aiello . . . Maids of honor will be Jeanette Wagner, 12, and Marilyn Wilkins, 13 . . . Uncle Dave Ginsburg will be emceeing as usual and there'll be 10 boxing bouts by the lads of the Prince Georges Boys Clubs . . . It's a big doing with the Hyattsville folk . . . Cochairman for the Kiwanians are Smith W. Purdum, jr., and Jess Baggett.

REPRESENTATIVE EDWARD A. MITCHELL (R., Ind.) was happy yesterday . . . His bill to exempt hospitalized servicemen and hospitalized veterans from paying a tax on theater and sports tickets given to them free, passed the House . . . Now HR 5065 goes to the Senate and here's hoping it gets the approval it deserves . . . Good for you, Congressman.

MRS. JOHN OBERLY is another happy person . . . One of the sparks that pushed along the creation of the Southeast Dramatics Association, Mrs. Oberly has the satisfaction of seeing the group make the finals of the District's twentieth annual One-Act Play Tournament. . . . The new group's play is "The Kite . . ." Others in tonight's finals at Roosevelt High (8:15) are old standbys in the tournament, the Arts Club, with Christopher Morley's "Thursday Evening," and the FBI Identification group in Robert Kasper's "Smoke Screen."

MARSHALL THOMPSON, Metro's engaging juvenile, will be paying a quick visit this week, arriving Wednesday night for two stage appearances the next afternoon at the Capitol . . . Marshall's the chap who was Van Johnson's pal in "The Romance of Rosy Ridge," and he played "Gallant Bess'" best beau . . . Next he'll be seen in "B. F.'s Daughter," with Barbara Stanwyck, and in "Homecoming," the Clark Gable film.

"HEDDA GABLER" opens a three-week run tonight at the King-Smith Productions, Inc., studio theater at the rear of 2118 Massachusetts ave. . . . Beatrice Newport, who's played many leads for the group, will be acting the Ibsen heroine, with Barbara Joyce, Patricia Coates, Paul Ballentyne, Leo Luckier, Russell Foster and Clara Thomas in the supporting cast . . . Reservations at ADams 0140 or 4112.

THE DAUGHTERS: Mary Eleanor Donahue, Ann Todd and Jane Powell are the children who cause Mother Jeanette MacDonald a good bit of trouble in "Three Darling Daughters," the musical which arrives Thursday on the Capital screen. Jose Iturbi and Edward Arnold are others in Metro's Technicolor springtime contender

Jury Indicts Prisoner In Assault

A 22-year-old prisoner was indicted yesterday by the grand jury on a charge of assaulting one of his companions in crime with a chair in a District Court cell block.

The incident occurred last Friday when Melvin T. Eckloff, 22, no fixed address, William H. Whitehair, 22, of 122 11th st. ne., and two other youths were awaiting sentence for hi-jacking a truckload of liquor last October.

Eckloff threw a chair at Whitehair, striking him in the head while they were in the basement cell block before appearing before Justice Richmond B. Keech, U. S. Marshalls reported. Both Eckloff and whitehair are now serving sentences.

The grand jury indicted George Brown, 41, of 1213 New Jersey ave. nw., on a charge of mayhem as the result of an altercation in which William Mack, 1607 New Jersey ave. nw., became totally blind.

During an argument over $1.50, Mack was struck and kicked in his right eye by Brown, according to police. Mack was already blind in his left eye and was able to identify Brown as his assaulter only by the sound of his voice, police said.

We're Spending
One Thousand Million Dollars... to meet your growing needs for oil

THE JOB AHEAD is a big job, calling for big plans and big performance.

Right now Standard Oil Company (New Jersey) and its affiliates are modernizing and expanding production and facilities at the greatest rate in their history. Expenditures for 1947 and 1948 alone come to one billion dollars. That's a thousand million dollars!

It is reported that the oil industry as a whole will spend 13 billion dollars over the next few years to do this job.

Why? What's going on?

Last year, this country used more oil than the whole world did in 1939—before World War II.

You're getting 61% more oil products now than pre-war. You're getting 12% more than even the biggest war-time output.

3 million more cars on the road than pre-war—buses and trucks up 25 and 30%! And the average car is using 50 more gallons of gasoline a year than pre-war!

1,500,000 more homes are oil-heated than in 1939!

Farmers have doubled their use of time-saving, work-saving tractors, trucks, and other equipment since pre-war!

And this is all to the good. It spells progress. It's part of America's better and better living standards.

It's part of the amazing fact that oil has supplied 62% of this country's whole vast increase in use of fuel over the past 20 years—for industry, agriculture, homes, and transportation.

But it also means close figuring between present needs and present capacity. Even today's record output doesn't give the extra reserve of available supply we've always had in the American oil business. This will be true until the full effect of the new, expanded facilities is felt.

But the big new supply for your new need is on its way right now. Wells being drilled. Refineries, pipelines, storage tanks built. Billions of dollars working as fast and as hard as skill and resourcefulness and experience can make them work.

The better you live the more oil you need. And the oil for your needs is on the way!

A. S. & T. Plans 7th Branch in Woodley Park

The American Security & Trust Co. plans to erect a seventh branch building at 2300 Calvert st nw., President Daniel W. Bell announced yesterday.

Bids will be asked in the near future and tentative plans are to open the new branch sometime in the late fall this year, if possible. The site, occupied by a small garage building, is at the corner of Connecticut ave.

The new office, to be known as the Woodley Park Branch, will be air-conditioned. In addition to the regular banking facilities, Bell said, it will include a safe deposit department, a night depository and a drive-in tellers window. Parking space will be provided. The two-story biulding will have a frontage of 57 feet on Calvert street.

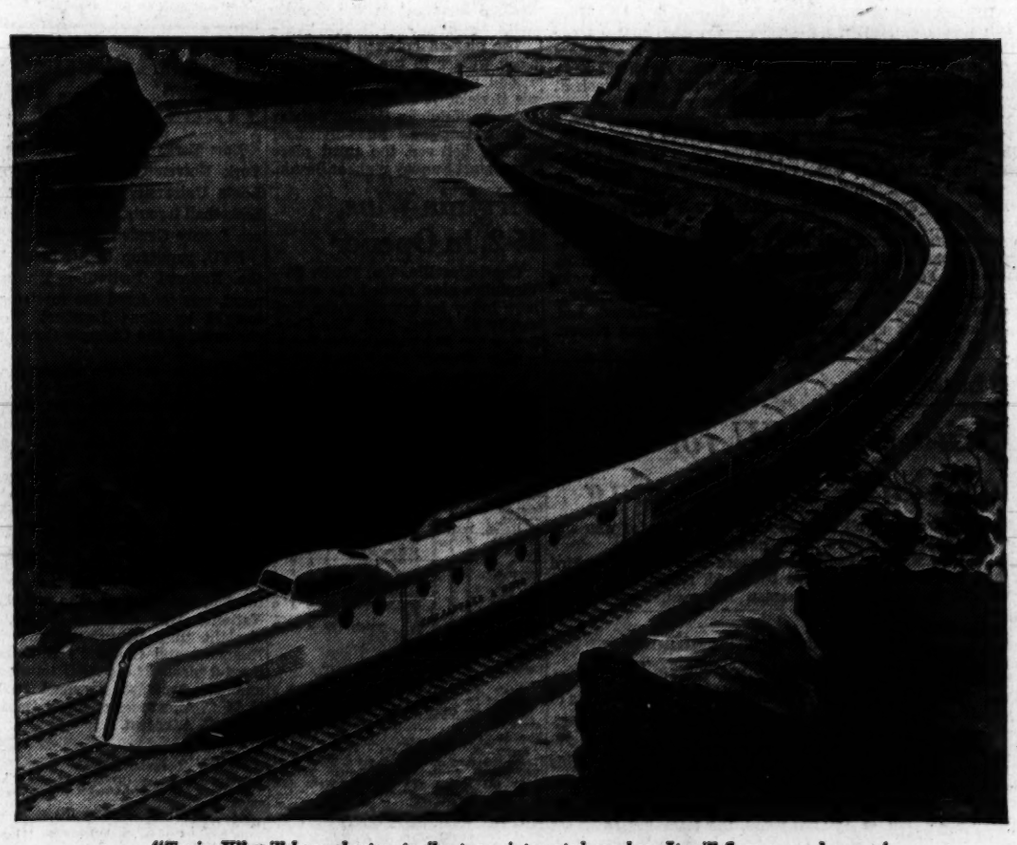
Memo No. 5 From The C&O To The New York Central

Great advances in comfort, convenience and speed are promised travelers by a revolutionary train design. Will the Central join us in developing "Train X"?



"Train X" will have shorter, trailer-type, integrated coaches. It will flow around curves!

To the New York Central:

The C&O's Research Department has been working on the design of a train so new that it may change all our present ideas of comfort, convenience and speed.

Since the New York Central's passenger business is so much larger than ours, why not join forces in this development?

The C&O is making the suggestion not only in the interest of all railroad progress, but also as the New York Central's largest stockholder.

"Train X" a Completely New Concept

"Train X" represents the most revolutionary change in railroad car design in half a century.

The coaches are much shorter than at present—so the train would flow around curves. There should be far less wrenching and side-sway than with present-day long cars.

Each coach is built on a trailer principle and each is integrated to the train. Because heavy, cumbersome trucks are not needed, the train can ride much lower—like a modern motor car. The roof can be as much as three feet lower without appreciably reducing headroom. The floor can be only 22 inches from the rails.

"Train X," because of its new-type spring and axle construction, should be able to round curves at far greater speeds than present-day equipment—with comfort and safety for travelers.

And with all these advantages, "Train X" would weigh only one-fourth as many pounds per passenger as present "lightweight" equipment!

What "Train X" Will Mean to Passengers

Engineers believe this new principle in car design will give travelers comfort heretofore thought impossible. Not only would car "shimmy" be minimized on the straightaways, but, on curves, the new coaches would lean inwards (as you do when riding a bicycle). Lurching should be almost eliminated. Passengers should be able to pass without bumping. You should sleep more peacefully than you ever have on a train.

Extra car width would achieve still other improvements in comfort—through wider bedrooms, longer beds and greater elbow-room.

What It Will Mean to the Railroad

To the Central itself, "Train X" promises two great advantages. The first is extra revenue from the attraction of more travelers. And the second is a tremendous saving in cost. "Train X," weighing only one-fourth as much per passenger as present equipment, will require less initial investment, less maintenance expense, less cost of wear and tear on roadbeds and far less cost for power. "Train X" is planned to be driven by an advanced, coal-burning, gas-turbine electric locomotive.

Why Not Join Forces?

"Train X" is still in the development stage. We are now negotiating for the first experimental coaches to be built. The greatest benefit, we believe, to both the C&O and the New York Central, could be achieved by joining forces now. With our combined experience and resources we could shorten the time before America could enjoy this really modern kind of travel.

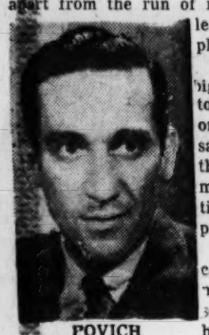
This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 22.—A new term has crept into baseball within the past year. "He's a bonus player," they say of this fellow, and that one over there. They're a special kind of group, apart from the run of rookies trying to make good in the big league camps. It doesn't mean they're better players. It could mean the opposite.



POVICH

What it does mean, however, is that some big league club paid a lot of money direct to the kid, or his parents, for his signature on a contract. He's a bonus player if his salary and bonus for signing exceeds $6000 the first year, but that's merely the minimum total. The bonuses they've been getting range as high as the $58,000 the Phillies paid Curt Simmons.

There are a dozen kids in the big league camps this year who were given $20,000 or more to sign after graduating from high school. They got the money before they had proved they could pitch a winning game in a class D league, or hit anything better than high school pitching. They're tabbed as great prospects, but right now they aren't as good ball players, as a rule, as the rookies who came up from the B leagues and were signed at $800 a month.

But the bonus kids will be kept, and the better rookies will go back to the minors for more seasoning. The bonus kids can't be sent out, you see. There's a rule against it.

OH, THEY COULD be sent out to the minors for more experience, but not easily. The rule reads that any bonus player brought up to a big league club cannot be farmed out unless waivers are obtained. The Phils tried to get another young bonus kid, Pitcher Charles Bicknell, whom they paid $26,000 for signing, waived to one of their minor league farms. Seven National League clubs promptly claimed him, on the theory that if the Phils paid that much for him, he was worth the $10,000 waiver price.

So the Major League camps are being cluttered with a lot of inexperienced kids who must be retained if the clubs don't want to lose their investments in them. To make room for this special class, other rookies who came up the hard way, must go back to the minors in order that the teams stay within the 25-player limit. It's one of the inequities of baseball. The rookies who didn't have the luck to get a big bonus at the outset, are being crowded out by this new class.

The Major League clubs drew up the new bonus rule in an effort to get out from under what had developed into high competitive bidding for schoolboys. Originally the majors could sign them without penalty of keeping 'em, and used 'em to staff their minor league holdings until they were ready to be brought up. Now, that's out. A bonus player must be kept if he is signed to a big league contract and it hasn't discouraged the bidding, either.

ANYWAY, ACCORDING to Clark Griffith, it's a rotten rule, and it is hurting baseball and the kids as well, and a lot of the clubs cheating, too. Griffith is worried chiefly by the threat to the caliber of big league baseball.

"They've got to keep these kids around or lose them, and what you are going to see is a lot of green boys parading in big league uniforms. Baseball standards are going to take a drop.

"It has started already," Griffith says. "Those boys ought to be back in the minors where they belong. A lot of baseball careers are being ruined by bringing 'em up too early and leaving 'em on the bench because they're not ready, or playing 'em when they're not ready, either."

Griffith doesn't blame the boys for taking the money. He blames the clubs for losing all sense of values. The kids would be chumps not to cash in on this frenzy to sign 'em," he says. "Certainly no boy can be blamed for wanting that big money they're getting. But these rich clubs are going crazy, and hurting the game. The purpose of the rule has been defeated."

IT WAS DIFFERENT in the case of Dick Wakefield a few years ago, Griffith points out. When the Tigers gave him $52,000 for signing, they weren't restrained from sending him to the minors three times, if necessary, before bringing him up. He didn't have to break in against big league pitching until he got a good look at minor league pitching in the Piedmont and Texas leagues.

"But the whole rule is a joke now," says Griffith. "They don't respect it anyway. They're doing a lot of business on the side, I'm convinced. I offered a catcher named Biddle a $12,500 bonus to sign with the Washington club. Then he decided to sign with Buffalo for $4000 a year. Buffalo has a working agreement with Detroit. Draw your own conclusions. Detroit will get him, don't worry.

"This under-the-table stuff goes on all the time. There was another young prospect I offered a big bonus to. He didn't take it. The Braves own Fort Lauderdale. That's the way they work, and he signed instead with Fort Lauderdale, in the Florida minors. There's got to be a pay-off somewhere, but it isn't recorded, and when the fellow comes up he won't be labeled a bonus player. Consarn it, I'm not being hood-winked."

Playoffs Set, Caps Meet Stags Tonight

Special Dispatch to The Post

Chicago, March 22.—The double-elimination tournament between Washington, Chicago and Baltimore for a playoff spot in the Basketball Association of America opens here tomorrow night with the Caps playing the Stags in game No. 1.

Although they're riding the crest of a five-game victory streak, the Caps are not favored to whip the Stags in the huge Chicago Stadium.

WWDC Covers Caps

Station WWDC, with Ray Morgan at the microphone, will carry a play-by-play description of the second half of tonight's Chicago Stags-Washington Caps basketball playoff game in Chicago at 11 p. m. Station WWDC-FM will handle play-by-play of the entire game at 10:15 p. m.

In this same Arena last year, the Stags eliminated the Caps from the championship playoffs and they have also scored three of their five wins over Washington here this year.

Road Is Rough

Even if the Caps win, the road to a playoff berth will still be rough. They must face Baltimore at Uline Arena Thursday. A victory over the Bullets clinches second place for Washington while Baltimore and Chicago will then meet for third place Saturday.

The Caps arrived here this afternoon and hustled through a one-hour practice. Coach Red Auerbach said he plans to employ the same starters—Dick O'Keefe, Irv Torgoff, Bob Feerick, Fred Scolari and Bones McKinney—who have been so successful in the recent Cap surge.

Scolari Gets Zaslofsky

Scolari will again be assigned the task of halting Max Zaslofsky, the league's new scoring leader. Zaslofsky dumped in 24 points against St. Louis Sunday to end the regular BAA campaign with 1008 points in 48 games.

While the Caps and Stags are battling here, St. Louis, Western Division winner, opens a best four-of-seven set with Philadelphia, Eastern champs, on the Bomber court tomorrow.

The play-off between the second place winner in the East and the second place winner in the Western Division is scheduled to begin at Madison Square Garden Sunday afternoon. The inter-divisional playoffs between the third place teams start Sunday night at Boston.

Virginia Wins, 15-2, in Opener

Charlottesville, Va., March 22—Virginia's nine opened the season here today by trouncing the University of Akron, 15-2. The Cavaliers made 18 hits including homeruns by Charles and Berner. Stanley Harris, jr., son of the New York Yankees' manager, got in the Virginia lineup in the eighth inning and registered one of the seven runs scored in that frame.

Coal Strike May Halt Bowie Trains

Special trains to the Bowie race track, opening next Monday, may be taken off the schedule, Pennsylvania Railroad officials said last night, in an effort to conserve soft coal due to the miners' walkout.

With the exception of certain periods during the war years, "specials" have been run from Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia. Bowie, during its early days, was dependent soley on rail transportation. However, in recent years the majority of track patrons have used private autoes and buses.

NYU Accepts Tourney Bid

New York, March 22 (AP).—New York University will replace St. Louis University in the Olympic basketball tryouts, opening at Madison Square Garden Saturday.

NYU, runnerup to St. Louis in the National Invitation Tournament, was tendered the invitation tonight by Gene Lambert, vice chairman of the Olympic Committee.

Al Nixon, graduate manager of athletics at NYU, accepted the bid.

St. Louis withdrew last night after the university's Athletic Board ruled the athletes should not leave their studies.

NYU joins three other colleges in the playoffs—Kentucky and Baylor, Eastern and Western NCAA winners, and Louisville, the NAIB champion.

Four independent teams complete the field. They are the Bartlesville, Okla., Ailers, who won the National AAU title for the sixth straight time Saturday, Denver's Nuggets and Oakland's Bittners, the 2-3 teams in the AAU tourney, and the Brooklyn Prospect Park Y. M. C. A., winner of the National Y. M. C. A. crown.

Middies' Win Now Official: 1405 to 1404

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

How to win and lose, all in one easy motion, was demonstrated to rifle experts of Maryland University yesterday by the National Rifle Association.

Maryland won a protest of Saturday's National Intercollegiate championship match at Annapolis, the NRA decided, gaining the point that might have toppled the Naval Academy to second place while the Terrapins successfully defended their title.

But in the recheck of targets by a five-man committee, Maryland turned up slightly overpaid, too. Arthur Cook's ninth shot from the kneeling position, instead of nicking the bulls-eye, was found to have missed by roughly 1/943 of a millimeter. The NRA figures things that closely.

Middies Win Anyway

Thus Navy's Middies, instead of winning by their original score of 1406-1405, won by 1405-1404. There wasn't expected to be any protest from Navy about THAT.

The whole thing started when Col. W. C. Griswold, coach of Maryland's entry in the event which was inaugurated in 1928, objected to Midshipman W. J. Sawtelle's score of 7 on his tenth shot standing. The colonel said it should have been a 6.

So did the NRA, working feverishly with its highly accurate instruments. The trouble was, for Maryland, that the NRA worked too well in reexamining all targets.

GW Entry Wins

The deciding committee was composed of Executive Director C. B. Lister, Frank Wyman and Frank Daniel of the NRA, and Lieut. Col. Walter Walsh, USMC, and Col. F. C. Endicott, USA, retired.

Navy took its first crown since 1939 and its sixth of the series. No other school among the 50 in national competition has ever won more than twice.

The National individual championship, after a survey of cards from 12 divisional meets, was awarded to Tom Moncure, of George Washington University. The Colonial ace had a mark of 288 out of a possible 300.

It Pays to Have "Unselfish Attitude"

New York, March 22 (AP).—Buddy O'Connor of the New York Rangers will get a $1000 prize although he finished second in the National Hockey League's scoring race.

O'Connor, who led the league virtually the entire season, was dethroned by Elmer Lach of Montreal Saturday night. Lach finished with 61 points, O'Connor with 60.

Lach will get the $1000 league prize. O'Connor will get $500 from the league and another $500 from the Ranger management "because of his unselfish attitude."

Sarasota, Fla., March 22 (AP).—Southpaws Mickey Harris and Mel Parnell blanked the Cardinals on two hits today as the Boston Red Sox banged two St. Louis pitchers for nine hits and a 4-0 Grapefruit League baseball victory.

Harris, virtually useless last year because of a sore arm, pitched five innings and not a man reached first against him until Red Schoendienst singled to right after two were out in the fifth.

Parnell took over in the sixth and wasn't found for a hit until the ninth when Larry Miggins tripled to the left field corner.

Kuhel Strategy

Nats Prepare To Slide but Not to Eighth

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

ORLANDO, Fla., March 22.—It has been said with some contempt that the seventh-place Nats of 1947, minus such stalwarts as Stan Spence, Buddy Lewis and Cecil Travis, could even slide out of the league this season.

But if that happens, they will at least slide out gracefully, and with know-how. Manager Joe Kuhel installed a sliding pit in the Washington camp today.

A sliding pit is something of a novelty with the Washington club. They haven't had one since the dear, dead days of Biloxi, Miss., 13 years ago. Washington managers before Kuhel presumed that their lads had learned to slide in the minors. Kuhel is taking nothing for granted.

HE HAS PLACED Coach Clyde Milan in charge of the business of showing the Washington players how to hit the dirt. Kuhel was a fair hand at the thing himself, when he was in the league for 15 years, but he delegates authority easily.

Kuhel is serious about the base-running business on the Washington Club, and has been talking about it ever since he took the job of managing the Nats.

"There's no sense kidding ourselves," he said originally, "we arn't going to power a lot of runs across the plate. We've got to scramble on the bases to get everything out of what we have."

He's never lost sight of that goal, either. Yesterday against the Tigers, Johnny Sullivan caught hell for going only half way to second from first, on a deep fly from center.

"You can go all the way to second, and then have time to come back when a ball is hit that deep, even if it's caught. And if it isn't you can score," said Kuhel. "Let's watch these things."

THE 1948 NATS are stacking up like a club that can run, it if gets on base. Gil Coan is, of course, the prize guy on the bases. But Mickey Vernon and Johnny Sullivan can scramble, too.

And those thick legs of Sherry Robertson are deceptive because he can also carry the mail. Young Al Kozar is better than fair. Eddie Yost isn't slow, either, but he doesn't know how to run the bases, yet.

Kuhel never did lead the league in stolen bases, but he was always close up. He was no flash, but he could slide right fancy, and he knows the efficacy of a smart slide. That's the big distinction between Coan and George Case.

Case was faster even than Coan, he proved in their memorable race a couple of years ago, but Coan could be even a more valuable base runner. Unlike Case, who often was injured in his awkward slides, Coan is downright tricky going into a base, and appears to like the whole idea of hitting the dirt.

MEANWHILE KUHEL is encouraged on a couple of counts. The club has been averaging 11 hits a game in its last five contests, and the pitching has suddenly picked up . . . Early Wynn, after one sad experience against the Reds, was hot against the Braves, and yesterday Sid Hud-

Coaches in the News:

Margarita Quits GU for Yale; Barclay Out of GW Running

Two Washington area football coaches and a third mentor who was employed here until recently were in the news yesterday.

Chief development was at Georgetown where Bob Margarita, hird only eight days ago to coach the Hoya backfield, resigned to accept a similar position at Yale under Herman Hickman, newly-named head coach.

At Maryland, George Barclay, No. 1 assistant to Head Coach Jim Tatum, announced that he had requested his name be withdrawn from consideration for the head coaching vacancy at George Washington.

Out in San Francisco, Eddie Erdelatz, Navy end coach under the Tom Hamilton regime, was mentioned as one of the leading candidates for the head job at St. Mary's, vacated last week by Jimmy Phelan who became coach of the Los Angeles Dons.

Margarita, former Chicago Bear halfback, is understood to have received a contract calling for $7500 at Yale and since the Hoyas could not meet that figure they released him to Yale.

Head Coach Jack Hagerty, now busy conducting spring practice, said he would like to find a successor immediately, but would probably have to wait until fall. Georgetown is looking for a young mentor with previous coaching experience and one who would fit into Georgetown's pay scale.

Barclay, former All-America at North Carolina, said he appreciated being considered for the position at George Washington, but had decided to remain at Maryland.

Erdelatz, an All-America end at St. Mary's, recently signed as an assistant coach with the San Francisco 49'ers of the All-America Conference. He has not made application for the Gael job, but alumni have strongly recommended him.

Arcade Pontiac Sponsors Girls Team

Washington's girls softball champions of the past two years, the Takoma Decorators, have reorganized, and will compete this year under sponsorship of Arcade Pontiac Motor Co. During the past two years, the team has advanced to the world's softball championship tourney only to be eliminated. However, newcomers will be welcomed to the team by Manager Milton I. Lewis, Lincoln 6388.

Robinson, Abrams Fight Postponed

Chicago, March 22 (U.P.).—A hand injury to Welterweight Boxing Champion Sugar Ray Robinson today caused postponement of his March 31 bout against Middleweight Georgie Abrams at the Chicago Stadium until April 21.

The bout had the approval of the Illinois Athletic Commission, which failed today to take action on Gov. Dwight Green's request for a ban on all boxing until April 7, but the fight was put off at the request of Promoters Irving Kovin and Mitchell Sandler.

Fishing Season On—Pop Can Start Lying

Herring Champion At Chain Bridge

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

The fishing season is on.

So put your fingers in your ears, Mother — Pop's coming home smelling of strong drink and the truth won't be in him — you know, just like last year.

Haight

I moved up the nearby Potomac with the herring run yesterday — making a tour of the famous District area fishing spots.

Haines Point and the Tidal Basin were blanks. I watched a fellow on the stern of a boat tied up to a wharf on the other side of Washington Channel. He spent an inactive 15 minutes while I watched.

Catfish Row, however, up on the edge of Georgetown where Rock Creek gives up its winding ways and empties into the Potomac, proved a productive spot, especially for William Gibson, of 1143 Lingers Court, nw.

In answer to my "How'a they biting?" Gibson used both hands to pull up a string of more than 40 catfish, a pound and a half to two pounds each.

"Any herring around?" I asked.

"They're snagging some over there in the creek now," he replied. "Will be better when the tide gets full. Then they'll go up as far as P Street. I don't fool with them. I'm a catfish and carp man, myself."

Gibson paused, perked his rod and began to reel in, saying "I snag a few herring to use as bait, but I can't see any sport in them."

A dozen fishermen cast envious glances as Gibson pulled up a big-mouthed cat, took it off the hook and held it in his hand as he continued, "The herring run is picking up due to the warm weather. If it keeps hot three or four more days they'll be thick as flies from here to Little Falls.

He slipped the cat onto the string, took out his penknife, cut a cube of herring a quarter of an inch square, replaced the bait on his top hook and cast out some 10 yards. I looked up and down the group of sportsmen without seeing any action.

Gibson aga nijerked his rod and another cat was on the way to the pan.

"Fished around here, man and boy, for more than 40 years," he explained. "Just have to handle cats with a certain touch. I give these other fellows my bait, but they just ain't got the knack."

When I left Gibson was grinning and his neighbors were frowning—but all hands were still trying.

At Fletcher's Boat House, midway between the Key and Chain Bridges, I found an unhappy Joe Fletcher. Joe has been sick most of the winter. The canal has gone practically dry. Over on the river, the ice (honest!) and silt are piled 10 feet high.

He expected a late start of the the season and the early warm weather caught him with his boats on shore. A crew is working on the boats and getting them overboard through a small, muddy canyon cut in the ice bank.

Albert Redmond, next to Fletcher's, said there was plenty of perch in the river off there and reported catches of a dozen or more.

The big show was being staged See HAIGHT, Page 9, Column 2 at Virginia end of Chain Bridge. The herring-hungry were hard at work and getting results, too, although I'll wager there's many a sore arm today.

The banks and rocks were fairly swarming with fishermen, mostly of the occasional variety. The method used is snagging, with a three-pronged hook on about three feet of line tied to the end of a bamboo pole or a thin branch. The hook is lowered into the current and jerked up. About one herring to 50 jerks (no personal reference) was about the average.

In with the herring were some white perch, a few being snagged. However, Herbert Simpson, of Parkfairfax, Va., was shunning herring and fishing for perch with garden worms. He had more than 50 some weighing a pound or more, when I was there.

Talked to Ira laden, No. 20 3d st. ne. and ob MacKnight, 1640 19th st. nw. They drove up and snagged for an hour, catching 30 herring and two white perch. "Just wanted to get a little fresh air and exercise," said Ira.

Yes, the fishing season is on, fellows. But don't lie until you see the whites of your wife's eyes —and then be careful.

Harry Albert Gets an Ace At Rock Creek

A GOLFER'S dream came true for Harry Albert yesterday at Rock Creek Golf Course when he sank his tee shot for an ace on the 165 yard fifth hole.

Playing with Ralph Haymaker, Fred Williams and Johnny Hagerty, Albert socked his spoon shot right into the cup to achieve a goal he's aimed at for 25 years.

"I've seen them hit the pin and I've dropped them an inch from the hole, but this is my first hole-in-one," the excited Albert said in the clubhouse.

Wildcats Are Heavy Favorites

New York, March 22 (AP).—Kentucky's polished Wildcats probably will rate from a 7-to-10-point favorite over Baylor's Bears Tuesday in their game for the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) Basketball Championship.

Kentucky, winner of the NCAA Eastern title here Saturday, while Baylor was outscrapping the Western field in Kansas City, holds an edge over the Bears in practically every department of play.

The Wildcats had a season's record of 31 wins and 2 defeats, counting play in the Southeastern Conference Tournament which they won, compared with Baylor's 21-5.

Through the season Kentucky averaged 69.1 points a game to 48.8 for the Southwest Conference kings. Defensively, the Cats also were superior, limiting opponents to an average of 42.8 points, compared with Baylor's 44.2.

But Kentucky's biggest margin over its NCAA finals foe is in the impressiveness of its victories.

Kentucky averaged 26.3 points a game more than its opponents while Baylor squeaked through with a 4.6 average margin.

Baylor's one outstanding edge is in the free throw department. The Texans have averaged 13.7 free throws a game for a .652 average. Kentucky connected on an average of 13.5 free tosses a game for a completion percentage of .626.

The Wildcats have two of the leading scorers in Alex Groza, with 385 points, and Ralph Beard, with 378.

Baylor's top point-maker is James Owens with 227 for the season.

In the preliminary consolation game at Madison Square Garden, Holy Cross, the runnerup to Kentucky in the Eastern playoffs, will rule a favorite over Kansas State, Western runnerup.

Ring Pilot Barred

Manchester, N. H., March 22 (AP).—Charged with "exploiting" a 15-year-old Somerville youth as a prize fighter, Frank Sylvestro, South Boston boxing manager, was barred for life from the ring in New Hampshire.

Sylvestro, known professionally as "Sully Emmett," was accused of falsifying the age of Cliff Hutchinson of Somerville, who was scheduled to appear in a semifinal professional bout at Laconia last Thursday. State officials became suspicious of Hutchinson's age when he weighed in and found he was only 15.

Boxers Must Submit Records To Fight Here

The D. C. Boxing Commission would have to submit a sworn record of the last five bouts involving main event fighters they want to box in Washington. The action effective immediately.

This statement will be attached to the application for the match and the application will receive no consideration unless accompanied by the records.

The National Boxing Association executive committee recommended this step in a 23-point program adopted at its weekend meeting in Philadelphia.

Following Lee Q. Murray's one-round TKO here last January, The Washington Post has published records of all main eventers here.

The Commission also announced that Middleweight Johnny Finnazo, of Baltimore, was not allowed to participate in a five-round preliminary fight at Turner's Arena last night because his medical examination yesterday showed that he had high blood pressure.

Leaderless Colonials Find Frog Island and Hop Around

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

George Washington's leaderless football squad found its way to Frog Island—an accomplishment in itself—and launched spring practice yesterday.

While the search for a head coach went on and on, 44 candidates answered the opening call and sweated out a two-hour session held hard by the Potomac and U. S. Highway No. 1.

Assistant Coaches Rog Antaya, Tim Swett and Ray Hanken led the flock through their paces which opened with calisthenics and closed with a sugar-coated version of the same.

There was no attempt yesterday to install an offensive system and there will be none until a head coach is employed to succeed Skip Stahley. Stahley, a single-wing devotee, recently resigned to accept a backfield coaching job at Washington U.

Joe Stanislawczyk, the Little America fullback from Potomac State Junior College, who transferred to G. W. last month, was most impressive. He is easily the most adroit deep-knee bender and push up expert on the squad. He was not tested on the side-straddle hop, but is rumored to be just as proficient at that, too.

Everybody wore regulation football shoes except Freshman Paul Barron, a back from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. He complained of aching feet and practiced barefooted. And Sophomore Frank O'Brien, a mountainous tackle candidate, wore only one shoe. His right shoe, he said, was a bit too tight for him.

There was plenty of the old hubba-hubba, razz-ma-tazz spirit in everyone, but Tailback Joe Buell exuded it. The former Mckinley Tech star, dropped for scholastic deficiencies last year, is back in school and dead serious about making his mark this time, in class as well as football.

Hanken divided the squad into backs and linemen for a game of touch football, with 22 on each side. The skirmish ended rather abruptly when someone kicked the best football into the Potomac.

Jesse Gilmer Has Much Backing to Succeed Anderson

JESSE GILMER, chief of Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration, has high-level support to succeed Clinton Anderson as Agriculture Secretary. However, he's from Texas, a State considered "safe" for Truman. Democratic politicos want the job for a resident of a "doubtful" Midwest State.

ED WILBUR, a management expert, has resigned from the Budget Bureau. He will join the State Department to handle the mammoth administrative problems involved in the transfer of Germany from military to State rule on July 1. Ed won last year's award of the Society for the Advancement of Management for having contributing most to good management in 1947.

HAMILTON ROBINSON would have resigned as State's security officer if he hadn't been smeared by a couple of Congressmen who questioned his loyalty. He has no intention of resigning under fire. The former law associate of John Foster Dulles, the Republican foreign policy adviser, may have some very interesting things to say if and when he does resign.

The Army and the Navy is thinking about swapping some office space. The general idea is to move some Navy people to the Pentagon, and to transfer a corresponding number of Army people to the Constitution ave. Navy Building. It would be a costly operation. In fact, the cost may force the plan to be dropped. As one top official said yesterday: "We are merely playing with the idea in an effort to bring about a closer unification of the Army and Navy. Nothing definite has been decided."

The first group of Immigration and Naturalization Service employes will be moved back here from Philadelphia on April 19. The move won't be completed until June. INS will go to Tempo Building X near the National Guard Armory.

The European Recovery Administration will be a separate agency, but it will be assigned office space in one or more State Department buildings. Estimates vary from 500 to 1000 as to the number of employes ERA will need. It all depends on how much work Commerce, State, and Agriculture will do for the new agency, or if ERA will want to take over functions of these three departments and operate them itself. And by the way, the State personnel office will accept applications for ERA jobs. It's in the Walker-Johnson Building on New York ave.

The National Labor Relations Board is expanding slowly and it will continue to grow for several months. The agency has been assigned additional space in the new RFC building at 800 Connecticut ave. . . . The National Resources Planning Board will not be moved in the Connecticut ave. building. . . . The Research and Development Board will be moved to the Pentagon the end of this month.

Defense Secretary Forrestal wants the office of the Vice Presidency strengthened. He wants the V. P. to be a real working official who would be able to step in and take over the Presidency on a moment's notice. Forrestal has presented his views to the Hoover committee which is studying Government reorganization. He's a member of it.

NOTES: The new phone number of Commerce is Sterling 9200 . . . Civil Service has announced an exam for chemists. The jobs will pay from $3397 to $5905 to start. Openings are at the Bureau of Standards and Public Health . . . Francis Loveless has resigned as information chief at Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service to return to active Navy service. He's a commander . . . Civil Service soon will give exams for four different jobs in Rural Electrification which are: engineer, poles inspector, home economist, and field representative . . . Only 4110 of the 10,107 who took the December exam for junior professional assistant passed it.

ANSWERS: These are newsy answers to questions I've been asked: Pensions for widows as provided in the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act are not retroactive to some past date. They became effective when the bill was signed into law. . . . A retired employe is not considered a Federal worker. He may engage in political activity the same as any private citizen and his pension won't be affected because of it. . . . A veteran who wins an appeal and is ordered restored to his old job must be credited with his unused sick leave. The same rule applies to nonveterans.

PAY PROGRESS: The Senate Civil Service Committee today will hold an important meeting on pay raises for Federal workers. A showdown on the Flanders and Langer bills is imminent.

POSTAL STORY: The postal supervisor is the operating genius behind the Government's $1,300,000,000 postal industry. But he's the truly "forgotten man" in Government. He rarely receives more than $5000 a year despite the fact he must supervise thousands of employes.

Half a dozen supervisors were exchanging notes the other day at a pay raise hearing before the House Civil Service Committee. Each of them had checked with the man who delivers their milk the week before. And in each case the milkman was paid a higher salary than the skilled supervisor. No wonder the supervisors are urging the Congress to give them a percentage cost-of-living pay raise! They deserve it.

Trade Board Asks Wider Sales Tax Application

Would Extend Levy To Exempt Items, Speed Collections, To Raise 9 Million

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A revised 2 per cent retail sales tax plan that would hit more goods and speed the first-year flow of money to the District was proposed to Congress yesterday by the Washington Board of Trade.

The group called for taxing all restaurant meals, eyeglasses, building materials, and other things that the District Commissioners had said should be exempted from their sales tax plan.

It also was advocated that merchants should make their tax returns and payments to the District every month, instead of every three months as the Commissioners proposed.

This monthly return was calculated to give the District nine instead of six million dollars in revenue during the 12 months starting July 1. Tax Assessor Edward A. Dent said informally he favored the change.

The trade board's call for a sales tax was backed by spokesmen for the Federation of Business Men's Associations, Federation of Women's Clubs and the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations.

The sales tax plan was sharply protested by spokesmen for the machinists union of Naval Gun Factory employes, the District League of Women Shoppers, the Women's Auxiliary of the United Public Workers of America, CIO, and the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection.

They advised assorted measures to make up the six million dollars by which the city budget of 101 million for the next fiscal year exceeds the revenue from present law. Among their ideas were a bigger Federal payment, now 12 million a year; a steeper income tax that would catch more people, and authority for the District to finance public improvements by borrowing.

Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), after hearing the final testimony, said "we'll let things simmer a while until we find out what is to be done with the budget."

Hearings on the city budget are to start next Tuesday before the House District Appropriations Subcommittee headed by Representative Walt Horan (R., Wash.).

To Joint Fiscal Group

The trade board sales tax plan was presented to the Joint District Fiscal Committee by Maj. Gen. David McCoach, jr., chairman of the board's municipal finance committee, and former District Engineer Commissioner, and by Jo V. Morgan, former single member of the District Board of Tax Appeals.

McCoach disputed the main argument of sales tax opponents—that it falls hardest on those least able to pay. He said it would be far less burdensome to low-income groups than would a property tax boost sufficient to raise the same amount of revenue.

McCoach submitted the following figures to show how various income groups would be affected by the sales tax and by the boost of the property tax rate from $2 to $3 per $100, which he estimated would be needed to match the sales tax revenue:

Family Income	Asess. Value Home	Annual Increase From $3 Home Tax Rate	Annual Sales Tax Payment
		Estimated
$1,750	$2,000	$20	$8.11
$2,500	$3,000	$30	$12.35
$4,000	$6,000	$60	$19.42
$6,250	$8,000	$80	$32.84
$8,750	$12,000	$120	$46.41
$11,250	$15,000	$150	$64.68

Protest by Union

Osville D. Dick and Frank Reagan protested the sales tax plan as representatives of Columbia Lodge No. 174 of the International Association of Machinists, employes of the Naval Gun Factory. "We are overburdened with taxes," said Dick. "We feel we could not carry any additional expense. We've all had to economize with the rising cost of living. If we can economize, we feel the District government can, too."

Reagan emphasized "we don't believe in false economy—we don't object to money for education, fire and police protection—but we see big cars marked for the Fire Department parked in front of some house for many hours, and we wonder if they couldn't be put to more use."

Income Tax Repeal

McCoach coupled the appeal for a sales tax with a call for repeal of the District personal income tax effective the last day of 1948.

Also urging a sales tax and the end of the local income tax were J. Nelson Anderson of the Federation of Business Men's Associations (he also urged ending the personal property tax); Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Leslie B. Wright of the Northwest Council of Citizens Associations.

Lined up against the sales tax were Mrs. Frances H. Lichtenberg of the Washington League of Women Shoppers; Mrs. Rae Ginsburg, of the Women's Auxiliary, UPWA CIO; and Mrs. Sybil Dinaburg, of the Washington Committee for Consumer Protection, and David Whatley, Washington attorney.

Montgomery Welfare Head Gives Up Job

Short Funds, Staff 'Frustrated' Her, Mrs. Kurtz Says

Mrs. Dorothy M. Kurtz has resigned her position as welfare director for Montgomery County, Md., because of "frustration and discouragement." She has held the job for 10 years.

Mrs. Kurtz

In a letter of resignation to Mrs. E. A. Merritt, chairman of the County Welfare Board, Mrs Kurtz said she was discouraged by the limited staff and "inadequate" State appropriations provided.

"There is a serious question as to whether the citizens of Maryland really believe in a program of public assistance adequate to maintain the standards of decency and health defined by statutes creating the public assistance program," Mrs. Kurtz declared.

Pointing out that "the consolidation phase of the welfare program has been completed," Mrs. Kurtz declared:

"I feel that the agency is now ready to embark upon a new phase of endeavor in which the quality of service rather than the variety of services offered should receive major emphasis."

After April 15, when her resignation is effective, she plans to return to California for rest and further professional study.

A graduate of the New York School of Social Work, the resigning director first came to the county in 1934 as case supervisor, returned to New York for further study in 1935, and assumed welfare directorship in April, 1938.

County Supervisor I. G. McNayr said he was "deeply sorry" about the resignation. Mrs. Kurtz will be a very difficult person to replace, he added.

Driver Hurt Critically as Truck Upsets

A 29-year-old delivery truck driver was critically injured last night when his truck struck a lamp post and overturned on 14th st. sw., a block north of Highway Bridge.

The accident occurred during the traffic rush at about 6 p. m. There was no traffic tieup, however.

Admitted at Emergency Hospital with possible brain concussion and arm and leg fractures was George Windsor, 1425 East Capitol st., driver for Daniel Loughran Co., wholesale tobacco dealers.

Police said Windsor was hurled from the truck and was lying unconscious astride a curb when passersby reached him. Damage to his truck was estimated at $500 to $600.

More than 100 dollar bills, believed either in the truck or on Windsor's person, were strewn on streetside grass for about 100 feet around the overturned truck, according to Police Pvt. A. W. Henderson.

Court of Appeals Upholds Romney Fraud Conviction

The U. S. Court of Appeals yesterday upheld unanimously the 1947 conviction on fraud charges of Kenneth Romney, Montana Democrat and former House Sergeant-at-Arms.

Romney, free in $5000 bond, was convicted last May of trying to cover up a $143,863 shortage in funds of his office which operated as a "bank" for House members. He was sentenced to from one to three years.

The Appeals Court found no basis for Romney's objection that the grand jury which indicted him was top-heavy with Government workers or that Justice Alexander Holtzoff showed prejudice when he smiled at one point during the testimony.

Ferris lived on the Gartrell property, police said.

Six Other District Bills Also Approved And Sent to Senatte

The House voted yesterday to extend District rent control to April 30 and approxed six other local bills in a half-hour District day, the first this year.

House action sent six of the bills to the Senate. They were:

1. The stop gap rent control extension from March 31 to April 30. Action on another year of rent control here is slated to follow final passage of a national rent control bill.

2. The armory control bill, setting up a three-member board to supervise nonmilitary uses of the armory and handle the income from them.

3. A bill to have salaries of Alcoholic Beverage Control Board members fixed by the Federal Classification Act.

4. Legislation to let the District increase use of the facilities at the National Training School for Girls.

A seventh bill, sent to the White House by House approval, would boost from $100,000 to $5,000,000 the amount of property that can be held by the Imperial Palace, Dramatic Order Knights of Khorassan.

The Senate District Committee scheduled a meeting March 30 to act on the one-year District rent control extension.

Soviets Erecting Monument as Kuskov Memorial

Moscow, March 22 (AP).—The Soviets are erecting a monument to Ivan Alexandrovich Kuskov, early 19th century explorer of California and Alaska and founder of Ft. Ross in California.

(The Russians established Ft. Ross on the California coast about 60 miles northwest of San Francisco in 1812. The fort, which was used primarily for trading with the Spaniards, was abandoned in 1841.

Izvestia, the government newspaper, said today the town council of Totma, city in the Volgoda district of northern Russia more than 400 miles due east of Leningrad, has decided to commemorate Kuskov, a native son.

Gas, Power Shortages Threaten Transit Line

PUC Postpones Scheduled Change From Streetcars To Bus Service

District streetcars and buses were caught yesterday between a threatened gasoline shortage on one hand already diminished coal supplies for electric power on the other.

The gasoline shortage was cited by an Interior Department petrolem expert as a reason for opposing conversion of a streetcar line to buses. The change over, scheduled for March 29, was postponed.

On the other hand, J. H. Ferry, vice president and general manager of the Potomac Electric Power Co., told the District Public Utilities Commission that present coal supplies from which electric power is produced will not last more than six weeks. Coal shipments have almost ended, he said, because of the miners' strike.

The Interior official, Max W. Ball, director of the Oil and Gas Division, recommended the PUC postpone conversion of the Capital Transit Co. Rosslyn-Benning streetcar line to bus operation because of the impending shortage.

Ball said that District gasoline supplies have been "nip and tuck here" in recent months and declared a day like Sunday boosts gasoline consumption here by 35 per cent over a cool or rainy day. He said that the most optimistic outlook for the District would be to "come out even." This would mean shopping from station to station as supplies run out, but would not mean that motorists would be stalled for lack of supplies, he explained.

Ball said the 800,000 to 1,000,000 gallons of gasoline the company estimated would be needed for the route for a year would "make a serious dent in the District supply."

If the weather continues warm and no economic recession develops, he said shortages would be widespread. As a step toward averting this, he said a national campaign will be launched shortly to urge shorter trips and travel at low speeds.

At present, rationing is not being planned, he said, but preliminary discussions have indicated the priority system would provide gasoline for governmental units first, public utilities next, farmers third and all other users thereafter.

Supplies Promised

The transit firm asked authority to make the conversion, basing its request on the amount of funds and effort already spent in preparing for it and on promises from fuel companies of adequate supplies of gasoline.

The firm's general manager, S. E. Emmons, introduced letters from the Petrol Corp. and the Texas Co. promising to supply the additional amounts needed. He also stated that two other firms—Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey and the Sinclair Oil Co.—had agreed to meet extra request which might develop.

Emmons said the firm had already placed orders or contracts for conversion of the carhouse on the route to a bus station, for leasing of additional land, for purchase of a tract and had accepted delivery on some equipment already. The amount involved was $340,000.

Schedules Revised

In addition, staff personnel had been working since November of last year preparing revised schedules for the entire system resulting from the conversion plan; the traffic department had worked many months making studies on which the rescheduling was based and 183 men were under training in order to make the shift.

The PUC took the matter under advisement, announcing that the hearings may be reopened if Senate investigation of the impending gasoline shortage turns up material deemed pertinent.

Jewelers Convention Views $250,000 Collection of Gems

The Washington Post

A FORTUNE IN GEMS—Mary Dorothy Ostmann of Burnt Mills Hills, Silver Spring, Md., plays with a quarter-million dollars worth of jewelry at the annual meeting of the American Gem Society. At her throat is a 101-carat gem star sapphire embellished with 36 diamonds weighing 6 carats. The big stone is valued at $25,000. "There is not another of its size and quality in the country," said a spokesman for Galt & Bro., Inc., the owner

A cool, sparkling $250,000 worth of some of the finest jewels in the world went almost unnoticed yesterday at a convention of the country's jewelers at the Statler Hotel.

Diamonds and rubies as large as your thumb, gleaming emeralds worthy of an Indian prince, a gem star sapphire the size of a pullet's egg—all these and 230-odd United States gem experts satin the next room perring happily at a mere $50,000 worth of assorted stones.

The reason, explained Alfred L. Woodill, executive director of the American Gem Society, is that the experts were intent on catching up on the latest developments in the field of gem identification. The $250,000 in precious stones could wait.

A few of the group officers, however, together with Iena M. Black, of their craft.

David Douglas Davenport, 33, Union Station whiskey peddler, yesterday was sentenced to 90 days straight time in jail on a charge of vagrancy by Municipal Court Judge Thomas D. Quinn.

Davenport

Davenport promptly appealed and was released on bond. It was the third time in recent months that Davenport had received a straight time jail sentence. He was released in the other two cases pending appeals against sentences totaling another 150 days. These cases involved charges of indecent exposure and assault.

Yesterday was Davenport's 93d court appearance in the past year. In 56 of the appearances, he secured continuances.

Collateral was forfeited or fines paid in cases invloving charges of peeping tom activities, disorderly conduct, selling whisky in violation of ABC regulations, and drinking in public. Fines and collateral paid totaled $220 in 11 appearances.

He explains that he brings whisky into Union Station by the caseload and deposits it in renal lockers. He sells a bottle at a time for varying prices, depending on what he can get. Service personnel are among his best customers, he says.

Carries Train Tickets

To maintain his right to be in Union Station, he generally carries train tickets for display on request. He claims to earn as much as $300 on a weekend.

His attorney, Saul Lichtenberg, yesterday pleaded leniency before Judge tQuinn. He asked the judge to accept Davenport's statement amed during the trial.

Davenport has stated that he sold liquor in Union Station which he frequented for various different reasons.

Judge Quinn replied: "Yes, I certainly accept his statement about selling liquor in the statinn." The judge levied the maximum jail penalty. Lichtenberg asked for an appeal bond. Davenport was released on $1000 bond, raising the total outstanding in bonds to $3100 in six different cases.

He has appeared before seven of the 10 Municipal Court judges as well as the late Judge Nathan R. Margold. In fact, sentence is still to be imposed in one case where he was found guilty of violating ABC regulations before Judge Margold who died last December. A new trial may be required in this case.

At House Hearing

New Court Building Supported

A sympathetic ear yesterday was given by the House Public Works Committee to legislation for the proposed $18,665,000 Federal Court's Building here.

Following a hearing at which District purists renewed their oft-repeated pleas for the long-delayed construction, Representative George A. Dondero (R., Mich.), committee chairman, and House sponsor of the legislation, commented:

"I think the committee is unanimous on this project."

Congress previously appropriated $370,000 for planning a 7-storie-high structure at 3d st. and Constituion ave. to house District Court and the United States Court of Appeals, but building costs have soared since a 1945 estimate of $12,720,000 for the project.

The only major question raised over the construction authorization yesterday was a fear that the cost might climb past the $18,665,000 level before work can begin. Under an "escalator clause" in the legislation, said Harry G. Hunter, assistant commissioner of Public Buildings, there would be authority to meet such a variation in costs.

This led Representative Gordon L. McDonough (R., Calif.) to suggest a 10 per cent limit on a higher construction cost, but Representative Dondero said after the hearing that he "doubts the wisdom" of such a move, which could be "an invitation to contractors to raise their prices."

Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws of District Court and Chief Justice Harold M. Stephens of the United States Court of Appeals pointed out "critical" overcrowding in the courts, with jurors often forced to wait hours in court corridors for want of jury rooms.

The overcrowding, said Laws, is even forcing consideration of night sessions of court, from 7 p. m. to midnight.

Laws struck out at comments in some quarters that the proposed structure will be a "marble palace." "We have asked for adequate housing, not luxury," he declared, and added that the building's appearance is required to be consistent with other structures here.

"The present manner of administering justice in District courts is not conducive to respect in the courts," declared Chief Justice Stephens.

Stating that the "institute of democracy is on trial throughout the world," he said, "Congress, the executive branch and the courts must be housed in buildings to impress people with democracy . . . as distinguished from totalitarian views."

Colorado Springs, Colo., March 22 (AP).—A 12-year-old boy was rescued yesterday from the conveyor belt of a sand mixer which was sucking him to certain death.

The youth, Loren Ernsbarger, screamed as he toppled into the hopper which fed the conveyor belt. Three workmen heard him and leaped into the hopper with their shovels.

They were unable to stop the belt. They improvised a wooden crib around him and shoveled sand away from the youth for an hour and 20 minutes before pulling him to safety.

Fire Alarm Firm Is Fined $33,250 on Monopoly Charge

The Gamewell Co., which supplies almost all of the District's fire alarm equipment and five of its officials have been fined $33,250 in Federal District Court in Boston on monopoly and restraint of trade charges.

At the same time, the House District Committee asked, for the second time, for an explanation of why former Fire Alarm Superintendent Herbert Friede, whose relationships wit hthe firm have been criticized, is still on a District payroll. Friede is now superintendent of communications in the electrical department.

In a criminal antitrust case, the GGamewell Co. pleaded no contest and was fined.

Clark Cites Agreement

Attorney General Tom C. Clark said that in a companion civil antitrust case the firm agreed to "terminating pas itilegal practices and restoring competitive conditions."

Fines in the criminal case included a $15,000 levy against the firm, whose address was listed as Newton Upper Falls, Mass.; $6000 fine against Frederick B. Philbrick, president of the company; $4000 fine on Vincent C. Stanley, former president; $3000 on Matthew Porosky, former vice president; $5000 on Edward J. McCarthy, general sales manager, and $250 on Grenfell Swim, assistant to the general sales manager.

Clark's office said the indictment charged the defendants with conspiracy to restrain trade in the fire alarm systems industry, including agreements by the Gamewell Co. not to sell or lease private fire alarm systems, and by the American Disrtict Telegraph Co., which was also fined, not to sell public fire alarm systems.

Monopoly Is Charged

The judgment entered by the court in the civil antitrust case was based on a charge that the Gamewell firm had a monopoly on the public fire alarms systems business. The judgment, said the Justice Department, requires the company to "discontinue collusive and discriminatory bidding practices." Among these were the advance framing of specification, which accommodated Gamewell with advertising for bids, the department said.

The District Subcommittee on Home Rule and Reorganization last July declared that Friede's relationships with the firm were not above suspicion and that he had caused adverse comment. Its report said that "to continue Mr. Friede in the employ of the District of Columbia under such a cloud of suspicion is beyond the comprehension of this committee."

Club Group Protests Religious Class Rule

The D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution vigorously protesting the Supreme Court's ruling on March 8, outlawing religious classes in public schools, and called upon Congress to pass an amendment to the Constitution permitting nonsectarian religious education in the tax-supported public schools of America.

Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, legislation department chairman for the federation, brought the matter up for "pondering," in a report of legislative activities. But Mrs. Ernest W. Howard, publicity chairman, said that it was time to act. She pointed out that this country was founded on religious freedom and contended that its principles are being shaken by the Supreme Court ruling.

Mrs. Vashti McCollum, Champaign, Ill., Freethinker, started the Nation-wide controversy when she went to court to stop the school from allowing religious classes once a week. The Illinois Supreme Court sided with the school, but she carried her fight to the United States Supreme Court.

Copies of the federation's resolution will be sent to the heads of the District Committee, Senator C. Douglass Reed of Delaware, and Representative Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.).

Mrs. Horace Phelps, the federation's delegate to the Federation of Citizens Associations, reported that the association would vote on an amendment to its by-laws next week. The proposed change provides that all organizations applying for membership into the association must be certified as not belonging to a subversive group.

District federation members voted that its delegation should support the amendment

One new club, Garden Club of Bradbury Heights, D. C., was admitted into the federation during the business session. Mrs. Alice Weickhardt is president.

Mrs. E. Morgan Pryse, first vice-president, presided in the absence of Mrs. Edward C. Magdeburger, president, who was called to St. Louis because of illness.

At the afternoon session Señorita Concepcion Aguila, Philippine educator now studying in this country, reported on progress made by the Filipino women in all professions.

U. S. Palestine Policy Denounced

By Genevieve Reynolds

Representative Jacob K. Javits of New York, I. F. Stone, Washington editor of P. M., and Mrs. Abe M. Cohen, president, Washington Chapter of Women's American ORT, yesterday denounced the United States' position on the partition of Palestine as announced last Friday.

Criticisms were hurled during speeches made before approximately 600 women who were attending the tenth annual membership luncheon given by the Washington Chapter, Women's American ORT, in the Mayflower Hotel. Representative Javits substituted at the last minute for Senator Claude Pepper, who was scheduled to make the principal address.

The New York Representative termed the United States' reversal of policy on the Palestine question and the embargo act on selling arms to the Jewish people there, "a double cross."

Referring to the decision made last Friday, he said, "the day couldn't be sadder or more significant. It teaches us that the Jews must depend on themselves. I am sure all of you were just as shocked as I at the betrayal."

"We'll fight to death and make a Jewish State in Palestine if it's the last thing we do," he declared.

Must Have Arms

"We must fight on every front," he continued, "the world only admires the successful fighter. Our first line is Palestine. My first act today was to introduce a bill asking Congress to revoke the President's power to place an embargo on arms. Jews can only fight with arms—they can't fight with olive trees. We must get arms to Palestine."

He said that in order to build a vigorous state Palestine must have people with skillful trades. "There's no room at present for lawyers, shopkeepers and," he explained, "ORT's role of vocational training and rehabilitation is enormously important at least until the United States and the world comes to its senses—which I am sure it will."

Representative Javits told of visiting DP camps in Europe. "The Jews and Christians are separated in DP camps, not because of discrimination but because they want it that way." He pointed out that the Jewish people in DP camps had excellent vocational and rehabilitation projects in all their camps, plus tools and instructors, whereas, the Christians had only one outstanding project in Germany. "The difference is so marked that I have made many talks in Catholic and Protestant churches urging my Christian fellow citizens to do something about the situation.

Speaks of DP's

The speaker said that so much effort is being put behind the Stratton bill that he sees a ray of hope for action by this Congress. "In teaching the DPs a trade and profession," he commented, "you are equipping them with the only possible passports."

Mrs. Cohen, chapter president, led the attack against the Administration's policy on Palestine in her opening remarks. "I am wracked with fury and frustration. On that black Friday the partition was sold down the river by the U. N. and by the Truman Administration and the State Department," she declared. "In this moment of betrayal, I say to you, no longer can we be observers in this life and death struggle. We must be participants."

"The Arabs are being armed by the British," she continued. "Diplomacy is lying in state and we are the mourners. Six million people were slaughtered in Europe, just because they were Jews. The rivers are red with their blood. . . . And the land fertilized with their bones.

"Where was the consciousness of the State Department then? What about the fragments of 2,500,000 lying in DP camps today? Where is the righteous indignation?" asked Mrs. Cohen.

"This sabotage by Truman and the Administration is said to be in the interest of national defense," said Mrs. Cohen, "but we really were sold down the river because of oil. The decision last Friday was the first shot in a fight against Jewish people and minorities all over the world. It was perpetrated by the same bloody weapon used by the Nazis." She referred to it as the "Chamberlain appeasement policy."

Explaining that ORT is not a Zionist organization, Mrs. Cohen, concluded, "We will continue to make builders out of the residents of Palestine. We will not be parasites. The ORT people will put tools in their hands and send the DPs to South America, Shanghai and bring them to the United States.

She told how 500 DPs trained in ORT schools in needlework had been sent to China, how ORT had given vocational rehalibitation training to over 25,000 in DP camps.

She ended with a plea to support the United Jewish Appeal.

Stone, author of "Underground to Palestine" said that "rebuilding of Palestine is going on no matter what happens."

Mrs. Louis Fedder, luncheon chairman, brought greetings as did Mrs. M. Elsberg, entertainment chairman.

4.5 Cent Meal Has Food Value Of Plate Lunch

By Lucia Brown

Want to buy a meal for 4½ cents that's equal nutritionally to a plate lunch of roast beef, peas, and potatoes, accompanied by a glass of milk?

You can do it with Multi-Purpose Food, a wonder product developed by Dr. Henry Borsook, of the California Institute of Technology, and introduced in Washington yesterday at a luncheon at the Brookings Institution.

The food, which has been used as a starvation fighter in Europe and among the Navajos out West for some months now, looks a good deal like granulated brown sugar. After 10 minutes simmering in water, it can be eaten "as is" or used in soup, meat cakes, and other mixtures. A 10-meal box of it sells for 45 cents.

Thanks to the efforts of a French chef who helped develop MPF, it has an appetizing nutty flavor all its own, which hasn't been true of similar foods in the past. Nutritionally, two ounces of it supply one-third of the normal day's nutritional requirements for protein, calcium, iron, vitamins A, N-1, B-2, Niacinamide and vitamin D. Only things it lacks are vitamin C and a full quota of calories, so it's a good idea to add a tossed green salad and a slice or two of bread to your MPF dinner.

A vegetable product, MPF is 86 percent soybeans, according to Donald Stephens, eastern manager for Meals for Millions, Inc., the nonprofit organization that distributes it. Its high protein content comes from the soybean.

Mr. Stephens, who spoke at yesterday's luncheon, said that the reason the food doesn't have that sharp flavor associated with some soybean products is that the oil has been removed. This makes it both tastier and cheaper.

Largely responsible for MPF's development is Clifford E. Clinton, West Coast restaurateur, who is interested in low-cost mass-feeding and gave away thousands of meals during the depression. Right now, the Multi-Purpose Food is being sold at cost to relief agencies, given to the needy where possible, and sold as cheaply as possible to individual buyers. It is especially useful for overseas shipment, as well as for making up for protein deficiencies at home in this day of high meat prices.

Chic Texan Designs Docks; Glen Cove Does Practical 'Campaigning' in Italy

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

ONE OF THE COUNTRY'S ablest architects has been visiting here from Texas. She is Lavone Scott, who commenced her career because her father insisted she learn a profession.

LAVONE SCOTT

Brunette, fragile, outfitted in Dior costumes, you'd never guess she designed docks, warehouses as well as some of Houston's finest residences. She was graduated from Rice Institute with a master's degree in architecture, became associated with architectural firms, specializing first in public buildings, then private residences, and afterward, to obtain experience in small-house design, worked with a group of contractors.

At the beginning of the war Mrs. Scott became architect and maintenance engineer for Anderson Clayton, a firm of international cotton merchants headed by former Assistant Secretary of State Will Clayton. Learning commercial architecture, she's designed for them everything from oil mills and demonstration kitchens to houses for their vice presidents.

A stepdaughter-in-law of Assistant Secretary of the Navy Andrews, she and the late Mrs. Andrews planned Wavertree, the Andrews showplace at River Oaks, Houston's handsome residential section. Some of Mrs. Scott's latest houses, incidentally, are modern in design, and to complete them satisfactorily she's had all the furniture specially constructed. Now that Lavone's youthful stepfather-in-law has returned to Washington, she will probably undertake commissions here. And, as a sideline, Lavone's continuing to design and make furniture.

Glen Cove's Long Handclasp

SINCE THE WAR, a number of American individuals and communities have "adopted" French towns and villages. Lately "adopting" has spread to Italy.

In these anxious days before the Italian elections, the efforts made by Americans of Italian descent to inform relatives and friends at home about democracy as we practice it, are especially interesting. Take Glen Cove, for example.

It's a Long Island township much publicized because of its wealthy, fashionable New York summer residents. More than half of Glen Cove's citizens are of Italian descent, as is their mayor, Luke Mercadente. Through American Relief for Italy, Glen Cove adopted Ponte Corvo, a town with about the same population and not far from the Cassino battlefield.

The "adoption" is more a cultural relationship than mere material support. First, everyone of Italian descent has been urged to write relatives, friends, acquaintances—tell them what is really happening in America. Next, to make aware of each other, on Monday and Tuesday of this week each high school girl and boy is bringing a pad and pencil to school. Pads, pencils will be sent to Ponte Corvo, each inscribed with a message of friendship from the donor.

Meanwhile, Glen Cove's doctors, men in other professions, are being put in touch with their opposite numbers in Italy, to exchange information, ideas of all kinds. The next move is to be a clothing drive. The clothing will be sent only if Communists are turned down in the elections—for otherwise the American Relief for Italy cannot guarantee delivery to intended recipients.

The Glen Cove-Ponte Corvo plan is outstanding because it is spontaneous. Even the humblest can participate, and it is not dependent on the largesse of those who find it easier to give money than time and friendship. If all goes well in Italy, the idea should spread over here.

Art With Mustard

THIS IS THE last week of Marcella Comes' exhibition of paintings at the United Nations Club. Marcella, who's Mrs. Randolph Winslow in private life, has 67 pictures in the show, among them portraits of such notables as Mrs. Francis Biddle, Mark Van Doren, Mrs. John Carter Vincent and her mother-in-law, Ann Godwin Winslow, author of the best seller, "The Quiet Neighborhood."

Quite the most encouraging story we've heard lately centers about the portrait of an old Negro Marcelle exhibited in Pittsburgh. Shortly afterward a Pittsburgh public school teacher telephoned, asked if her pupils could buy it. The kids had started an art collection, were raising money for their acquisitions by selling hot dogs!

HER MAJESTY, the Queen Mother of Romania, will be honor guest of the Women's National Press Club Saturday, at a reception in the Presidential Suite of the Statler from 5 to 7 p. m.

Swiss Minister and Mme. Bruggmann Will Entertain

Mr. Grassli is leaving for Tokyo the middle of April to head the Swiss diplomatic mission there. Mme. Grassli is going to Switzerland first and will join her husband in Japan at a later date. Mr. Bisang has been named Counselor at the Swiss Legation in Ottawa, Canada.

The Ambassador of Italy and Signora Tarchiani gave a reception Saturday evening at the embassy, following the showing of "Thanks America" at the Warner Theater.

Your Morale Can Improve Your Figure

By Ida Jean Kain

JUST FOR fun, let's take a new and gay way to get your figure out of the dumps. The emphasis will not be on how to reduce. You know how! It's inspiration that's needed, with a bit of slimming information woven in. So for three exciting weeks we'll have daily morale builders and mental gymnastics.

Brace yourself . . . fat is a state of mind! Oh, to be sure, the assorted carbohydrates and the fat trimmings figure in weight and bundle about the waist, but generally speaking, fat is mental. Figure it out . . . no woman, you nor anyone else, wants to be slightly on the solid side. Then why can't you call a halt before you overeat? Because you love food? Chances are it's deeper than that. The basic causes back of overeating are boredom, or some form of discontent. Get out of the rut and you can pull your figure out of the dumps. What's more, it can be a gay adventure.

To carry through on our spring tonic course, first you must want a good figure and want more fun out of life. For years you've been blaming the excess pounds on a lack of willpower. But willpower is nothing more or less than desire. So if you desire to bring your figure to life, you can! Desire is what shapes your actions and consequently your habits.

Why Not Drop the Load?

—Fat is very real, too. So that our model Barbara Anne could see it in a lump sum, so to speak, she carried 20 pounds around the block. To get an idea of how much of a burden you're toting, pile books on the scales to represent your exact number of excess pounds. Quite a load, eh? Carry it further. Pile the books in a gunny sack, or a suitcase, sling it over your shoulder and tote it around the block . . . all the way around. Don't put it down once. A silly idea? Then why are you carrying it, every minute of every day? Why not drop the load . . . for good?

Barrie didn't go on a diet, not really. She ate to slim off 20 bulky, bundlesome pounds. She had an enormous appetite—so we used all the tricks of this dietitian's trade to whittle it down to size. She could hardly believe it when she felt quite full and content on far less food. Get on the "reducing on a budget diet" and see for yourself.

But to get out of the mental rut, start something new this spring. Read an awakening book on philosophy, get out of the house and tramp in the woods, learn a new dance step, take up fortune telling . . . get a new hairdo and a gay new hat! Our model went in for bowling and can now roll up a score of 160. See if you can beat her.

Reducing on a Budget

Eat to beat the high cost of food and banish excess fat. These low calorie menus afford perfect nutrition at comparatively low cost.

To get the most nutritive value at low cost and low calories, skimmed milk is used in place of whole milk. Restricting dairy fats to lower calories lessens the Vitamin A. This can be secured in a concentrate without calories and at a cost of a bit over one cent a day. Supplement menus with one vitamin A and D concentrate, supplying 5000 units of Vitamin A and 400 units of Vitamin D per day. Oh, use one multiple vitamin concentrate.

Since all foods included may not be available everywhere, inexpensive substitutes and interchangeable foods are listed—also recipe for special salad dressing.

Easy way of cleaning windows, mirrors, windshields, refrigerators, and glazed tile is with the new wax product. No washing is necessary when this preparation is used. It's simply wiped on, allowed to dry, then wiped off. It leaves surfaces not only clean but brilliant and gleaming.

Give roaches the brush-off with a powerful liquid insecticide that can be painted on roach-frequented surfaces and will remain effective for six months. Containing chlordane, this liquid is said to be 5 to 10 times more effective than DDT but is harmless to animals and pets. It's too good thing to have handy at this time of year.

Party at Iran's Embassy Marks Ancient Festival

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE ANCIENT Festival of Norouz was celebrated yesterday at the Embassy of Iran. Persians in Washington saw in their New Year, 1327, at a pleasant garden party, given by the Minister and Mme. Noury-Esfandiary.

A bright colored marquee was spread over the wide terrace in the garden, where hundreds of guests gathered. Inside two buffets were set up—one in the small drawing room and one in the dining room. The Iranian Embassy is noted for its hospitality, and yesterday it outdid itself in the delicious food served. There were shrimp and chicken on rice with mushroom, salads and hors d'ouvres, all beautifully prepared, and a variety of cakes and ices.

Miss Margaret Truman arrived alone about 7 o'clock. She was dressed in a green silk frock and gray straw bonnet. Raymond Muir of the State Department recalled that Margaret had accompanied the Persian Princess Ashraf on her shopping tours when the princess visited here last summer. When asked if he had met King Michael, Mr. Muir said he had and that he was "a nice King."

The Indian Ambassodor, Asaf Ali, talked with Judge George D. Neilson and Mrs. Neilson, said he was leaving the middle of April for England. The Ambassador plans to go from England to India and not to return. R. K. Nehru, new Minister at the Indian Embassy, will act as charge d'affaires until a new Ambassador is appointed.

Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Nover, spoke of the reception at the Italian Embassy Saturday evening as one of the loveliest in a long time. French windows opened on to the patio and the moon shone through the trees. Moving pictures were taken of the guests by Jack Warner of Warner Brothers. The news about Trieste was an added fillip to the evening.

Just back from New Zealand, the Minister of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen were surrounded with friends at the Iranian party. They brought a green good luck stone to pretty Senora de Belt, wife of the Cuban Ambassador, who was proudly showing it around.

Alexei Korobochkin, Counselor of the Soviet Embassy, spoke of a dinner given Friday by the Ambassador, Alexander Panyushkin. The guests, he said, were the Ambassadors of Norway, Sweden, Denmark and China and their wives, and the Minister of Switzerland and Mme Bruggmann.

The Ambassador and Mme. van Kleffens took a stroll around the Iranian garden before it grew too dark, and left to keep a dinner engagement. Mme. van Kleffens said she was expecting her sister, Mrs. Raymond Wilson of London, England for a visit sometime after Easter.

Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Willard Thorp talked with former Ambassador and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris were there, and Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young. Also, Chester Carre, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rankine, Mr. and Mrs. Parker Jamison, Emil Mattar of the Lebanese Legation, Robert Peterson of New York, Nathan Bartlett, John McCloy of the World Bank, Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Sanger, and Khosrow Ghashghai and Habib Ghashghai, the latter two being members of a famous tribe in Persia.

Girl Who Lost Her Mother Some Years Ago Is Living With Mother's Cousin Now, Who Disputes With Father on Point of Rearing

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am confronted by a ticklish question in the matter of rearing the daughter of a cousin of mine who died a few years ago.

The father provides financial support. He pays for her board; also gives me a dress allowance for her clothes and other incidentals, such as music lessons, club dues, church contributions, car fare, etc.; and in addition gives her a generous weekly allowance for her personal spending.

Helen, now 12, is a bright attractive capable girl, in popular demand with our neighbors for baby sitting and other chores. In this way she earns quite a tidy sum, and because she earns this money herself, her father feels it is hers to spend as she likes—which she does.

Debate Centers On Girl's Funds

NEITHER of us has any idea how the money is spent; nor, for that matter, just how much she earns, except as she happens to mention it. But I feel that as Helen's guardian I should know how she is spending the money and perhaps have opportunity of guiding her early financial experiences by helping her decide on ways of spending to best advantage.

Although I have never had a daughter of my own, I feel that no 12-year-old is capable of deciding such things entirely alone, without supervision or training to help her choose wisely.

However, her father disagrees with me on this point and inasmuch as he is her parent and source of support I suppose I have no right to insist on having my opinions prevail. Nevertheless I am concerned and would like your help. T. S.

Mother-Substitute Seems Domineering

DEAR T. S.: Too much supervision is almost worse than too little in its effect on character development of children; and although your letter sounds beautifully reasonable on casual reading, it is my guess that you are in essence a domineering person with a yen to preside over every detail of the doings of those in your charge.

Helen wouldn't be hiding her personal earnings and expenditures therefrom behind a wall of reserve, so far as you are concerned, if you hadn't failed seriously in the matter of establishing reciprocal trust and relaxed good will in personal relationship.

She is on the defensive, and so is her father instinctively, against your tendency to be officiously supervisory in the role of guardian, and it just happens that her earnings constitute a focal point for bringing emotional conflict into the open, with her father using the incident to openly demonstrate sympathetic championship of the child, just on general principles, I suppose.

Tends to Dictate Rather Than Teach

ON the surface, your avowed concern to teach her money-sense seems quite plausible. If a child earns money or has an allowance, his social education should include sensible guidance in managing funds, of course. Otherwise he may get into mischief or form lasting habits of squandering.

However, right training must honor the theory that the child's allowance or voluntary earnings belong to him; else respect for property (his own or others) will have no meaning for him.

Also it must be animated by the guardian's realization that a child can't be expected to see eye-to-eye with adults on desirable investments, and that he must be allowed some personal initiative and margin-for-error in learning the rewards of thrift and judicious spending,—which I mention because your insistence on wanting to help 12-year-old Helen "choose wisely" and "spend to best advantage" smacks of impulse to rule rather than teach.

The hallmark of the born leader or good teacher (in the home as elsewhere) is the ability to evoke the affectionate confidence and respect of those he guides; and now that Helen is crossing the threshold of the teens, your influence with her will progressively wane and problems of conflict will multiply, unless you can establish that kind of footing. So for advice, go down the line in modifying your own behavior. M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Much Less Trouble

When there are several children in the family it is much easier to use a different-colored cross for the underwear of each child than to use initials. At a glance you can tell to whom the article belongs and so can the children. Let the youngsters select their own colors and they will always remember.

Women Staff Red Cross Booths

Prominent women in diplomatic and civic circles are presiding at the 70 Red Cross booths, which opened yesterday in Washington as part of that organization's annual drive for funds.

The booths have been set up in hotel lobbies, department stores, banks and other public places in an effort to reach thousands of persons who may not have been solicited at their homes or places of business.

Mrs. Charles Eustis Bohlen is chairman of the booth committee and her vice chairmen include Senora de Belt, wife of the Cuban Ambassador; Senora de Baron, wife of the Cuban Minister Counselor, and Mrs. Paul Nitze.

Those who are staffing booths at the Mayflower, Statler and Carlton hotels include:

Lady Inverchapel, wife of the British Ambassador; Mme. Koo, wife of the Chinese Ambassador; Mme. van Kleffens, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador; Mme. Mica Trbojevic of the Yugoslav Embassy; Mrs. Narciso Ramos, wife of the Minister Counselor of the Philippine Embassy; Mme. Berard, wife of the French Minister Senora de Heurtematte, wife of the Commercial Counselor at the Panamanian Embassy; Mrs. H. T. Andrews, wife of the South African Minister and many more.

Europeans Are Guests

Current guests at the Willard Hotel include Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Norton of London, Mrs. I. Ellinger, also of London, Mrs. B. Marco of Sussex, England, and Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Stallard of Sutton, Surrey, England.

Others from Europe stopping at the Willard are Mr. and Mrs. Aamund Elvesater of Lom, Norway, Emilie Arenales of Paris and Mr. and Mrs. C. Aberegg of Berne, Switzerland.

Ask Anne

Your Questions On Homemaking

Is it a good idea to wax mahogany furniture. E. D. R.

Whether you apply wax to furniture is a matter of your individual choice. Building up a protective coating of several layers of wax on furniture does protect the wood against stains and some blemishes. And, once a hard protective wax coat is built up, the piece is easy to keep looking attractive.

To A. B., who recently inquired about where to obtain tarnish-proof bags for storing candelabra and other silver! A wholesale distributor of these bags can be reached by telephoning REpublic 1490. He says that he can arrange for you to obtain bags of the proper size through your local jeweler or sell them direct to you.

Attention L. L.: Several readers of the "Ask Anne" column have written that they can supply the type of greeting card service in which you are interested, that of sending cards to friends and relatives for you on specified dates. Telephone numbers of these readers are as follows: Trinidad 9405; Oliver 3515; Hobart 8464; Hyattsville 0070; Ludlow 7177; Alexandria 4544; Wisconsin 6352; Lincoln 1842, and Warfield 2245. Another reader advises this service is offered by a firm whose address is Box 65, West Farms Station, New York 60, N. Y.

We lived in Poland a good many years and at Easter time enjoyed a special kind of cake called "Mazurki." There were many different kinds, but the one we liked was a rich, rather crunchy cake spread with preserves and frosted, then decorated. I have experimented but simply can't achieve the proper dough, which is neither cookie, cake, nor pastry. I wonder if you, or any of your readers, could help me. I would like very much to have it for Easter. L. M.

Can any of our readers supply the Mazurki recipe?

I have a set of pottery which has a tendency to chip. Since it is in fairly dark colors, the chipped places are very evident. Is there any paint available with which I could cover the white chipped areas, without having to fire the plates? It would be helpful if I could mix my own colors since they are not the usual hues seen in ordinary china—blue-green and brown-rose, etc. L. H.

There is a plastic paint on the market which can be used for making these chipped spots less conspicuous. This paint can be mixed to secure the shades or tints you wish and does not have to be fired. For further information about it call Dupont 6607.

Some time ago, you had a note in your column saying red wood burls were available at a florists on 18th st., nw. Would you let me know the name, as I am anxious to get some. E. M. K.

A flower shop on Dupont Circle has had red wood burls, but do not have them now. They tell me that they received only one shipment this year and are not expecting any more this season. Since the burls are cut only during the winter months, it is late for securing some this year. Perhaps if you call Dupont 7000, they will put you on order to receive some when their next shipment arrives in November.

Could you give me a guide on spring cleaning for my house? What should spring cleaning cover? S. J.

Spring cleaning covers all of the large cleaning jobs one does not have time to do in weekly cleaning, plus refurbishing. Also, such jobs as painting, putting up screens, and airing winter clothes and blankets are usually done more easily at the time of general cleaning.

Most homemakers find it less upsetting to home routine to take a room at a time for this general cleaning. The order in which you clean the rooms is a matter of choice, but starting at the top of the house, working down is a plan some housekeepers find works well. In cleaning a bedroom, remove all the clothing from the closets, place where they can air. Take down curtains. Remove bedding from bed and place in sun. With the vacuum sweeper attachment go over the mattress, springs and bedstead to remove dust. Go over walls with sweeper attachment. Now, wash woodwork and windows. Wash floor if necessary and rewax. Go over furniture thoroughly with a furniture cleaner and polisher. Replace clothes in closet, storing away the winter ones. Make beds and hang curtains. If you plan to clean all the bedrooms in one week, you could wash all the curtains, dresser scarfs and throw rugs before cleaning the rooms so they will be ready to hang when each room is clean.

This same general plan would be followed through the house. Clean upholstered furniture with the vacuum sweeper attachment. Pictures are easier cleaned if you remove them from the wall, dust the backs, wipe frames with a damp cloth and wash glass with window washing solution. In the kitchen, clean the cupboards and stove before washing the woodwork.

Michigan Bars School Classes On Religion

Lansing, Mich., March 22.—Public schools of Michigan no longer may cooperate with churches in the matter of religious education, the State Department of Public Instruction has ruled. However, it did not rule out reading of the Bible in the schools.

The verdict, based on the recent U. S. Supreme Court decision in the Champaign, Ill., case, says:

"Religious training classes may not be conducted in public school buildings, nor can Michigan's compulsory school law be used in any way to enforce attendance at sectarian training classes elsewhere."

The department's legal division said it believed there could be no objection to reading the Bible in schools, so long as there is no comment or discussion of a sectarian nature.

In ruling that clergymen may continue to take part in school programs, so long as they refrain from sectarian discussions, the department declared:

"The court indicated that you can't go so far as to remove all evidence of religious thinking from the schools."

Good News For Folks Who Suffer From

✓ STOMACH GAS
✓ ACID INDIGESTION

Do you feel bloated and miserable after every meal, taste sour, bitter food? If so, here is how you may get blessed relief from this nervous distress.

Everytime food enters the stomach a vital gastric juice must flow normally to break-up certain food particles; else the food may ferment. Sour food, acid indigestion and gas frequently cause a morbid, touchy, fretful, peevish, nervous condition, loss of appetite, underweight, restless sleep, weakness.

To get real relief you must increase the flow of this vital gastric juice. Medical authorities, in independent laboratory tests on human stomachs, have proven positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in increasing this flow when it is too little or scanty due to a non-organic stomach disturbance. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps build-up non-organic, weak, watery blood in nutritional anemia—so with a good flow of this gastric digestive juice, plus rich red blood you should eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better.

Avoid punishing yourself with overdoses of soda and other alkalizers to counteract gas and bloating when what you so dearly need is SSS Tonic to help you digest food for body strength and repair. Sterilizes Soil

Weed Killer For Tobacco Exhibited

Port Tobacco, Md., March 22 (Spl.).—A machine which sterilizes soil and prevents growth of grass and weeds has been demonstrated by its inventor here.

Hillen J. Morgan, Mulberry Grove Farm, explained that his machine, which consists of a boiler and a steel pan, will sterilize 6 square yards of soil in about five minutes. Previous methods used by tobacco growers took as much as 20 minutes, he said.

"I believe it will operate commercially as a great saving to the farmer," Morgan stated. "I have applied for a patent, and expect the machine will be available on a commercial scale by fall."

The 42-horsepower steam boiler is mounted on a trailer. The pan, 6 feet by 9 feet, is connected to the boiler by a steam hose. The pan has 218 jets through which steam is forced 4 inches into the soil, killing all weed and grass seeds and soil-borne bacteria.

One treatment a year is sufficient. Morgan has used the machine on 3000 yards of tobacco beds, and found it completely satisfactory, he reported.

Tomorrow he expects to demonstrate the machine to extension service experts from the University of Maryland at Upper Marlboro.

Mass Picketing Injunction Asked By Koppers Plant

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—The Koppers Co. today asked an injunction against mass picketing, intimidation and violence at its Bartlett-Hayward plant, strike-bound since February 27.

The order was asked under Maryland's labor injunction law. It seeks to restrain the International Association of Machinists (independent) and 12 individuals.

Judge W. Conwell Smith set a hearing for Monday.

One Koppers worker has been killed in a scuffle at the plant. Although one of the men involved has been indentified as a striker, the incident has not been definitely connected with the labor dispute.

The Bartlett - Hayward plant makes airplane propellers.

Court Dismisses Contempt Ruling Against Mayor

Luray, Va., March 22 (AP).—Circuit Judge William V. Ford, today dismissed a ruling against Bernard Painter, Mayor of Stanley, on a contempt-of-court summons.

Although Painter had been in contempt of court, Judge Ford said, the ruling was dismissed "because Painter had bad advice from counsel."

The show cause order against Painter was obtained by Commonwealth's Attorney I. R. Dovel, who charged the Stanley mayor refused to allow the records of Charles K. Hackley, former town justice, to be audited before a grand jury.

Hackley, indicted on charges of bribery and embezzlement, is to appear in court Thursday, or Monday.

Three More Enter Md. Congress Race

Annapolis, Md., March 22 (AP).—Three more candidates filed today for the May congressional primary contests.

Representatives Edward A. Garmatz, Democrat, and Glenn J. Beall, Republican, filed their certificates with the Secretary of State. Garmatz represents the Third District, Beall the Sixth.

In the Fourth Congressional District, Leo H. McCormick, former State OPA administrator, filed as a Democrat, the fifth in the race for the job held by George H. Fallon. Fallon is one of the five.

Three Democrats besides Garmatz have filed in the Third District: Paul E. Burke, Anthony F. Didomenico and Stephen B. Peddicord.

Beall is the only Republican entered in the Sixth District contest. Thomas O'Connell of Silver Spring is the lone Democratic candidate so far.

Md. Girl, 4, Killed By Father's Truck

Ferndale, Md., March 22 (AP).—Four-year-old Charlotte Knight was crushed to death under the wheels of her father's gravel truck at their home in nearby Severn, Md., today.

Henry Preston Knight, 32, told Anne Arundel County police he had driven into the driveway and his children ran up to the truck.

He told them to stand aside while he dumped the gravel. Then he moved the truck forward and felt a bump under a real wheel. When he jumped out, he found Charlotte under the wheel.

She was pronounced dead at South Baltimore General Hospital. Police booked the father on a technical charge and he was released without bail for a hearing later.

Hospital Plan For Indigent Up Thursday

A plan to broaden the scope of hospital contracts covering payment for care of District indigent is to be placed before the District Commissioners Thursday.

The plan, result of several months study by the Hospital Council of the National Capital Area, will be precented by Daniel W. O'Donoghue, jr., as chairman of a council committee. He will be accompanied by William R. Castle, council president, and members of boards of local private hospitals.

Object of the proposal is to try to offset losses local hospitals say they now suffer from care of District residents who cannot afford to pay their hospital bills.

The District government has contracts with Children's Emergency and Casualty hospitals on a $7.50 per day basis for tax-eligible indigent patients. Other local private hospitals, however, receive no funds for the care of the indigent. Until Community Chest funds were cut bask, these were used in many cases for indigent in private hospitals.

Under a new ruling, however, Health Security Administration funds are restricted to persons not eligible for tax relief.

Under the Hospital Council plan, all clinic visitors who are indigent and who receive care other than at municipal hospitals would be paid for by the District, as would indigent patients admitted to hospitals as emergency cases, patients unable to pay who are referred to a private hospital because of lack of space in a municipal hospital, and patients who are admitted as bona fide private cases but are not able to pay their hospital bills.

Passenger Robs Office, Steals Cab to Escape

Baltimore, March 22 (AP).—Volney Rosser, cab driver, became suspicious when a passenger got out without paying his fare.

"That's all right," the passenger said. "I'll be back as soon as I pick up some money in this Western Union office."

Rosser waited. Finally he glanced into the office. His passenger had vanished.

Also, $800 had disappeared from the Western Union office with him. Mrs. Louise Joeckler and Miss Alice M. Nickolson said the man held them up at gunpoint and fled through the back door.

Rosser called the police, gave them a description of the passenger, and returned toward his cab. It was gone.

The bandit had made good his promise to come back, and used the cab for a getaway.

Strengthen U. N. To Block Soviet, Dr. Aranha Urges

Petropolis, Bazil, March 22 (AP). Dr. Oswaldo Aranha, president of the United Nations General Assembly, tonight said the United Nations must be strengthened "so that Russia will be incapable of expansion."

"The Russian people, of belated liberty and culture and with the industry of the 19th century, do not want to adapt themselves to democratic order, but to subvert it." Aranha told a world convention of junior chambers of commerce.

"Our task," he said, "is to halt the march of war and revolution.

"I recognize the gravity of the moment. Russian expansion and Communist violence have provoked in me the same repugnance as in others of the western world. However, I am convinced peace still is possible."

Abortion Charged In Death of Girl

Huntington, W. Va., March 22 (AP). A Huntington physician and a practical nurse, charged with the death of a young woman from an abortion, waived a preliminary hearing today before Judge H. Clay Warth.

Dr. William Mitchell Lewis, 61, was released on $10,000 bond, and Miss Julia Darling, 28, identified as his assistant, posted $5000 bond.

State Police Sergt. Beryl Langford said the warrant for their arrest, issued by Magistrate Walter Rasnick, was based on a section of the law dealing with abortion operations.

It was issued after the death in a Huntington Hospital of Miss Mildred Ferguson, 23, of Narrows, Va., police said. They said the girl was taken to the hospital after an abortion performed in the physician's office.

Bromfield to Address Friends of Land Rally

Post Office Department Should Hire Mind Readers

At 7 o'clock tonight the Post Office Department will put on display a curious lot of merchandise, some of it quite valuable.

Included will be a tremendous variety of stamps and coins. Some of the stamps are canceled, some not. Some are in sheets or sets, others are a jumble of odds and ends.

The coins come from such far-flung places as China, Italy, Mexico, France, Japan, Germany, Cuba—and of course that fabulous land known as "Miscellaneous."

The display will be open from 7 to 10 tonight and from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. tomorrow, in Room 3083 of the Main Postoffice, N. Capitol and Massachusetts ave.

It will attract hundreds of Washingtonians and scores of out-of-town dealers and jewelers. The jewelers buy the coins for their metal content.

Tomorrow night at 7 an auction sale will begin, and the Post Office Department will start knocking down this strange collection to the highest cash bidders. Thousands of dollars will be realized—by capitalizing on the absent-mindedness of the department's customers.

Yep—all these valuable coins and stamps are being released for sale by the Dead Letter Office.

Most of the unclaimed matter was dropped into the mails by people who were so forgetful that they failed to tell Uncle Sam where it came from—or where it was supposed to go.

PISCATORIAL POINTERS

Cora Fisher's request for information regarding local fishing brings two responses—one of which should be quite helpful.

Bradley J. Bell of 1380 Fort Stevens dr. nw. writes:

"Rock Point, Md., is a fine fishing spot. It offers good fishing and crabbing from May until December.

"The first to start biting are croakers and perch. Trout start around July, and the rockfish start in August and run until late in November.

"I do a lot of fishing there and usually have good luck. The last rockfish I took weighed 14 pounds.

"The Rock Point Hotel will take care of parties over the week-end and it has a nice fishing boat. Rock Point is 50 miles from here over good roads. Take Highway 5 to Newburgh and then left on Highway 3 to Rock Point."

That's all the serious fishing advice we have for the Fishers. But G. A. Fisher of 1442 Spring rd. nw. weighs in with:

There once was a fisher named Fisher,
Who fished from the edge of a fissure.
Since a fish, with a grin,
Pulled the fisherman in
They now fish in the fissure for Fisher.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

M. F. Newmeyer of 2808 Northampton st. nw. observes that spring was bringing us an annual New Look long before anybody ever heard of Dior.

WAITING FOR THE WAITER

On an average of once a week my waiter disappears after serving the dessert, and then I'm left to fret and fume until he reappears to give me my check, so that I can be on my way.

I keep promising myself that some day I'll muster up enough courage to walk out without paying my bill, on the grounds that nobody has given me one. So far, I've been a coward; but I'm working on it.

D. B. Harrison of 900 19th st. nw. sends in a bit of poetry which expresses my sentiments in gratifying fashion:

Why the waiter is a "waiter"
Always puzzles me.
When I dine out, without a doubt,
The guy who waits is me!

GIVE-AWAYS

"Housebroken white cat, a perfect lady in every respect; has had two litters in past six months, carrying third. I'm leaving for California, can't take her along." (Twining 0463).

SAME BOAT

James A. Elliot of 7101 Chestnut st. nw. is another of those District Liners who can tell a birthday coincidence story. Jim and his wife were both born on March 12, and both were born in 1918.

All of which certainly puts Mrs. Elliot at a decided disadvantage. Unlike most wives, she can't remain 29 years old for a dozen years while her husband keeps on aging.

Listen to Bill Gold each noon, Monday through Saturday, over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (96.3).

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK.—During a hectic session at Lake Success, Jan Masaryk conferred privately with a young, inexperienced diplomat, and advised him to get in on the behind-the-scenes sessions and not spend all his time and efforts on floor work . . . "Remember this," Masaryk told him, "in politics, as in tennis, the backhand is as important as the forehand."

Jarmila Novotna, the Metropolitan Opera singer, was a friend of Masaryk, and tells of the London conference at which an official arrived at a meeting accompanied by a bodyguard. The official apologized for having had to take this precautionary measure. "Oh, don't mention it," Masaryk assured him. "I'll get my bodyguard, too." Then he went to the door and whistled for his Scottie.

Eleanor de Bekassy, daughter of Mrs. Joe Davies, finally received her French Legion of Honor decoration last Saturday. It was awarded to her two years ago, but she couldn't find time to accept . . . Fletcher Martin, the artist, was best man at the wedding of Gypsy Rose Lee and Julio de Diego Wednesday . . . Although Miss Lee has a 26-room house, Diego will continue to do his painting in his own studio.

Jack Warner arrived from his office and the maid at his home gave him some phone messages. "You had one other call, sir," she told him, "but I couldn't understand a word the person was saying. It was completely unintelligible. I'm sorry, but I just couldn't get his name" . . . "I'll call him right back. If you couldn't understand who was calling," was Warner's correct guess, "then it was Salvador Dali."

NEW Scientific Discoveries Used in Hair Experts' Exclusive Treatments Help You To GROW THICKER HAIR
Hopeless Cases Not Accepted
Hair Experts' Scientific Plan Allied with Nature's Functions!
Upon Nature's innate system of growth is based Hair Experts' specialized system . . . a plan that results in thicker hair NATURALLY grown and nurtured to full strength and virility with the aid of modern scientific formulae. First, the scalp is thoroughly and professionally cleansed of its dandruff or other disorders through special, gentle but effective germicides which penetrate below the skin surface to kill the source of the infection and then reopen clogged passages.
Then when the basic cause of the scalp trouble is routed, Hair Experts begin the rejuvenating treatments that start to show actual results within weeks.
Special Exclusive Laboratory Created Formulae Used ONLY by Hair Experts!
After energizing the papilla to action, and then creating a fertile "field" for that growth, Hair Experts' special formulae (scientifically created by and for them) stimuate the sub-scalp hair growth to normal, natural length, strength and thickness. Then sluggish blood circulation is normalized to flood the hair follicles with life-giving "food" for hair growth.
Delay Is Deadly! Fatal Follicle Shrinkage May Negate Any Treatments!
Once your hair begins to show these symptoms; excessive hair in the combings; weak, short hair; excessive dandruff; itchiness, etc., you can be sure that a scalp disorder is already well under way. Follicle shrinkage is fatal!
Once it has set in your chance for thicker hair is practically negligible! Come in IMMEDIATELY for a free, private scalp examination. Relax under our pleasant, professional treatments and care, and enjoy THICKER HAIR within a few months.

Discouraged Democrats Quit

By Drew Pearson

Discouraged, a lot of good Democratic congressional candidates are pulling out of the November race. Ex-Senator Jim Mead was planning to run for Congress from Buffalo; Frank Emma was planning to run from Utica, N. Y.; George Kelly from Rochester. Believing Truman's chances are almost nil, they've now changed their minds. . . . Stassen's undercover boys have contacted Ives for Vice President on Stassen's ticket. So far no result. . . . General MacArthur's backers are determined to put him across in Wisconsin—or else. There'll be a big billboard campaign throughout the State. If they don't win in Wisconsin—his home State—they figure MacArthur's chances in other primaries are nil. . . . Mayor David Lawrence of Pittsburgh, high Democratic mogul, urged President Truman last week to stage an all-out fight against Henry Wallace or face defeat. . . . The Texas delegation to Congress is split—seven Congressmen for Truman and fourteen against him. . . . Tennessee's Senator McKellar has been quizzing colleagues as to who can run against Truman for the Democratic nomination. McKellar wants a Southern-Western ticket.

Pearson

Attention Congressman John Taber: What's become of that five-million-dollar deficiency appropriation for the State Department's "Voice of America"? While you dilly-dally, the money is urgently needed to carry on pre-election propaganda in Italy . . . Editor Will Bohn of the New Leader urges that President Benes be requested to appear before the United Nations Security Council to explain how the Communists took over Czechoslovakia . . . Italian businessmen are making arrangements to get their money out of Italy in case of a Communist putsch. The Italian lira has dropped 20 per cent since Christmas . . . The State Department is planning to spend 20 million dollars of its interim aid money in Trieste—still the hottest spot in Europe . . . The Army's Inspector General has made a secret report on black marketeering by American Army officers in Germany. It's pretty bad . . . The United States will move for Italy's admission into the United Nations. If Russia vetoes Italy once again, the Italian people at least should know who Italy's real friends are.

Congressmen have their housing problems too—sometimes of their own making. When they inquired about renting apartments in a new building within the shadow of the Capitol, they found that a two-bedroom apartment rented for $500 a month. Reason: When Congress passed the rent-control law last year it exempted new apartments from rent control . . . The brother of ex-Secretary of War Pat Hurley recently turned up as a California ranch-hand. He had been missing for 37 years.

Margin of mirth

A little humor now and then . . . At somebody's expense . . . Is always entertaining if . . . It offers no offense . . . We like to kid each other and . . . To have a bit of fun . . . By using friends to make a joke . . . Or illustrate a pun . . . But we should act the ladies and . . . The gentlemen we are . . . And keep ourselves from carrying . . . A comedy too far . . . We ought to be considerate . . . And faithful to the rule . . . That nobody deserves to be . . . The butt of ridicule . . A little banter helps a lot . . . To pass the time away . . . But we should never hurt a soul . . . With anything we say.
